550 Dead, Storm Cost Estimated at Half Billion

12,000 in Distress Rivers Subsiding U. S. Sends Supplies Bay Area Engulfed

By the Associated Press.

The long and growing list of the hurricane dead in the Northeastern States climbed past 550 last night, but the rivers receded, and it appeared the earlier menace of flood had been abated. Damage was in the hundreds of millions.

The subsiding of the rivers, and the absence of any report of widespread disease, was the only good news from the storm area.

A detailed survey of hurricane destruction in the vicinity of Westerly, R. I., including the Watch Hill resort area, tonight brought the estimate of dead in that stricken section to 104 and raised the total for Rhode Island to around 240.

Many were still missing, and the possibility existed the toll would rise still higher. The Coast Guard received a message from the Cutter Phelan saying one of its officers had gone ashore at Watch Hill and was informed there were 200 dead in the section.

Toll Placed At 104

The Coast Guard's radio report did not make clear whether the estimate of dead was confined to Watch Hill or the general area of Westerly.

The Providence Journal, after a survey, placed the dead in that section at 104, and added that all but 20 had been identified. Earlier, the toll in the Westerly area had been listed as 124, with 57 missing.

Direct damage remained impossible of real estimate, but an arbitrary figure of $500,000,000, based in part on the official estimate of Gov. Quinn, that little Rhode Island alone had lost $100,000,000 in property values, appeared conservative.

No other State official even attempted a guess in dollars and cents.

Rivers Receding

The American Red Cross announced that 12,000 New England and New York State families were in acute distress. Many of these were homeless; others were living under the rawest of emergency conditions.

[Shots were fired last night, according to the United Press, as National Guardsmen sought to curb looting of summer estates along the 50-mile crooked arm of Cape Cod where many persons died in Wednesday's hurricane and resultant tidal wave—Editor's note.]

Falling river crests were reported from New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

The rampant Connecticut River leveled off to a high flood crest here last night with hip-booted working crews confident that sandbags, hastily piled upon threatened dykes had saved the insurance capital of 175,000 population from further devastation.

City Engineer Robert J. Ross expressed confidence that the water would not break through a vulnerable section standing between the river and a district housing 5,000 comparatively unperturbed tenement dwellers.

Crest Believed Near

Indications that the crest would not top the record $20,000,000 Hartford flood of 1936, when the water went to 37.5 feet, were seen when the gauge receded eight hundredths of a foot at 1 a. m. this morning.

Government engineers, aiding local authorities, pointed out that

Cold Still Keeps Roosevelt In

President Roosevelt remained away from his office again yesterday, because of his head cold. He received several callers and later the Cabinet in the White House proper.

Stephen T. Early, secretary, conducted the regular Friday press conference, and said Mr. Roosevelt was making progress in combating the cold. He said the President would like to return to his Hyde Park home next Thursday, if the doctor and the foreign situation permit.

Tubercular Adults Will Go To Glenn Dale

Ruhland Asks Ruling D. C. Heads Approve Allen Vetoed 1st Plan

By Gerald G. Gross.

Facing what is perhaps the most critical public health situation here in years, the Health Department yesterday obtained permission to place adult sufferers in the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md.

The District Commissioners approved Health Officer George C. Ruhland's request for the authorization, The Post learned, on the following conditions:

Only "emergency cases" among adults will be admitted to the children's ward.

Overruled by Allen

Dr. Ruhland, confronted with a similar problem of adult bed shortage and a half-empty children's ward last November, ordered a section of the juvenile building set aside for grownups, but his action subsequently was overruled by Commissioner George E. Allen, despite indorsement of the health officer's

Americans Told to Quit Czech Soil

Envoy Gives Notice Roosevelt Sees Baruch Cabinet Meets Here Hull Holds Parley

By Robert C. Albright.

More than 5,000 Americans in Czechoslovakia are being warned to take steps for their safety and immediate departure, the State Department said last night.

Warnings at Prague by American Minister Wilbur J. Carr were approved by the Department, as Cabinet officials from the President down surveyed the imminent possibility of war and its effect on American interests.

Gravity of the situation was emphasized in the notice by Carr that conditions were such that at any time it might become impossible for Americans to leave Czechoslovakia.

President Sees Baruch

The President, though ill with a cold, conferred with his cabinet, and received Bernard Baruch, New York financier and former head of the War Industries Board, for discussion of "world economics."

The Treasury continued to canvass the likely results of a European war on America's economic position. Jacob Viner of the University of Chicago, who left the Treasury last spring because of dissatisfaction "with the way things have been going in the country," was invited to make a special study of international financial problems resulting from the war scare.

While the Government remained aloof from European involvment, every step was being taken to protect this country's economic position in event of a war and to safeguard Americans abroad.

'Best Financial Brains'

Faced with problems involving the tri-parte monetary agreement, the stabilization fund, and the flight of more than $500,000,000 in foreign gold to this country, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau continued conferences with "the best financial brains of the country," so business might continue as usual in event of a European conflict.

Secretary of State Hull, who advised the President and Cabinet colleagues on the European situation, also passed a morning half-hour in conference with French Ambassador Rene de Saint-Quentin.

Minister Carr's warning to Americans in Czechoslovakia was announced at the State Department shortly after President Edouard Benes ordered mobilization of the Czechoslovakian fighting forces.

Risk Is Stressed

The Department said Carr has been notifying Americans in the central European republic of their danger for two days and was "naturally authorized to issue such a warning at any time and in any way that he judged wise on the basis of the local situation."

Carr pointed out it is of "utmost importance that every American citizen should take steps without delay to insure his safety by being prepared for immediate departure," the State department said. The "great risk" which would be run by remaining was emphasized.

As the Czech mobilization order covered automobiles, trains and

D. C. Couple Describes New England Gale Havoc

An eye-witness account of the havoc caused by the New England hurricane was given yesterday by Mrs. Robert T. Murley, 3000 Thirty-ninth street northwest, who outraced rising flood water to arrive here Thursday night after a 17-hour automobile drive from Springfield, Mass.

Persons living in the part of Springfield susceptible to flood damage were awakened by police late Wednesday night after the hurricane had passed, Murley said, and warned to get out of the path of the rapidly swelling Connecticut River.

The Murleys were visiting Mrs. Murley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Paradise, whose home has been damaged by previous floods. Inhabitants of this section were preparing to leave their homes and go to higher ground. As Mrs. Murley's parents arranged to go to the homes of relatives in other parts of Springfield, the Murleys decided to leave immediately for Washington.

"We left Springfield," Murley said, "at 2:30 in the morning. If we had been five minutes later, I don't believe we would have been able to make it, as we escaped being cutoff by rising flood waters by just about that length of time.

"We were forced to detour about 100 miles. Travel was exceedingly difficult since trees had toppled in all directions, limbs and other debris littered the streets and power

Prague Calls 1,500,000 to Colors; Regulars Retake Border Towns

Special Cable to The Post.

Prague, Sept. 23.—President Benes signed an order tonight for general mobilization of the army and reserve forces.

At 10:26 p. m. (4:26 p. m. Eastern standard time) tonight, when the order was broadcast, the Czechoslovak army of about 650,000 men already was under arms. All officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the first reserve, from 22 to 40 years of age, were ordered to report for active duty within the next six hours, bringing the total to nearly 1,500,000 men. All officers in the second reserve, who have specific assignments in the military preparations, also were ordered mobilized.

The mobilization was decided during today's meeting of the cabinet, over which President Benes presided at Hradchany Castle. The new premier, Gen. Jan Syrovy, inspector general of the army, who succeeded Premier Milan Hodza yesterday, declared the time had come for Czechoslovakia to defend herself with every means at her disposal.

People Cheer

The mobilization order, which was broadcast throughout the nation, was preceded and followed by the playing of the national anthem. As soon as the news was on the air, men began to leave their homes, carrying full equipment, or hurried home to say goodbye to their wives and children.

On the streets of Prague the people, overjoyed at the chance to assure the safety of their republic, cheered and yelled. Every taxicab and private car was placed at the disposal of men going to the front. Railroad stations were filled with departing men, carrying suitcases and heading for the frontier.

Gen. Syrovy did not want to provoke an invasion, but he is determined to resist any attack on the border areas.

Baruch Put Up $10,000 to Bring U.S. Loyalists Back

By the Associated Press.

Bernard Baruch, New York financier, disclosed yesterday that he had put up $10,000 to bring home 83 wounded members of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade fighting for loyalist Spain.

In Paris last July he discovered that the staff of the United States consulate was worried about raising transportation money for the men, who were scattered about in several French hospitals. Cost of returning them to America was $120 each.

"You've got the money," Baruch told them, and wrote out a check.

Explaining his act, Baruch said: "They were willing to fight for something they believed in, and I had the money to bring them home when they got hurt."

Hopkins declined to discuss the "political interference."

Daladier Pledges War If Nazis March

Premier Commits France Bans 'Coup de Force' Army Chiefs Confident

By John Elliott.
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Sept. 23.—France will fight for Czechoslovakia if now, after her acceptance of the Anglo-French peace plan, the Czech nation is invaded by German troops.

This categorical statement was made by Premier Edouard Daladier this evening to a group of 30 radical deputies who called to voice their confidence in him.

The premier's communication to the deputies was given to the press by Pierre Cot, former air minister, who said he was explicitly authorized by the head of the government to repeat his remarks. Cot is the French statesman who was singled out and abused by Hitler in his Nuremberg speech for declaring Czechoslovakia would serve as an admirable airdrome from which to bomb Berlin and Dresden and the industrial cities of Saxony.

Chamberlain Brings Back Hitler Views

Cabinet Meets Today Poles Soothe Halifax British Fear Putsch

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 23.—Britain's patient prime minister may yet stave off war.

Neville Chamberlain is returning from his Godesberg conference with Adolf Hitler, it was learned tonight, with a new proposal to prevent armed invasion of Czechoslovakia, and will submit it tomorrow to his cabinet.

The proposal is described as a compromise between the German demands for immeditae occupation of Sudetenland and the Anglo-French peace plan of last week, which would have postponed occupation for some weeks, until the revised frontier could be drawn by an international commission of neutral experts.

One unconfirmed report current tonight was that Hitler had offered to wait as long as five days before invading Sudetenland provided

Poles Reject Soviet Warning To Abandon Czech Claims

By the United Press.

Warsaw, Sept. 23.—Poland tonight told Soviet Russia, in effect, that she intends to go ahead with her program to regain control of the Polish minority in Czechoslovakia regardless of what Moscow may think about it.

Replying to a Russian note today warning that the Soviet government will denounce the Russo-Polish nonaggression pact if Poland invades Czech territory, Foreign Minister Joseph Beck notified the U. S. S. R. that:

All Polish military concentrations on the Czech frontier are of an internal character and have no connection with Soviet affairs.

Poland "knows precisely" the texts of the documents she signs and is also aware that the Polish-Soviet pact of 1932 provides that if either of the contracting parties commits an aggression the pact automatically lapses.

Soviet denunciation of the pact is not warranted, a foreign office spokesman said.

Poland's attitude toward the Czech crisis was as follows:

"Poland does not expect satisfaction of her claim that Polish minorities in the Teschen-Silesia area of Czechoslovakia shall result from the present conversations in Godesberg, Germany, between British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and German Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

"Poland believes that the Godes-

Situation Not 'Hopless,' Prime Minister Says Hitler Feels That Czechs Can't Be Trusted Midnight Parley Ends in Virtual Deadlock Polish, Hungarian Claims May Be an Issue

By Ralph W. Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post.

Koenigswinter, Germany, (Saturday) Sept. 24.—Following a dramatic three-hour interview with Chancellor Adolf Hitler at the Hotel Dreesen, which ended at 1:40 this morning (7:40 p. m. E. S. T. Friday), Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain said in reply to a query:

"I do not consider the situation hopeless. I am going home this morning to present new proposals to the Czechs. It is up to them now."

The grave question at issue is Hitler's threat to drive Czech troops and police forces out of those areas of the Sudeten territory of Czechoslovakia which are allotted to Germany under the London-Paris cession project.

Though the door still is ajar for further diplomatic exchanges, the Hitler-Chamberlain talks may be said to have ended in virtual deadlock. As far as could be determined, the dictator had refused to give a guarantee asked by Chamberlain, that he will not take military action in the period required to work out full details of the London-Paris plan and put the project into effect.

Hitler Says He Can't Trust Czechs

In a nutshell, Hitler's arguments against a guarantee, are: First, that the new Czech government cannot be trusted to honor the agreement given by its predecessor to the London-Paris plan; second, the Sudetens even now are "in serious danger of wholesale slaughter" at the hands of the Czech forces—witness the alleged incidents reported under sensation streamer headlines in the Nazi press.

To such arguments, Chamberlain, in his conversations with Hitler, answered in effect, that once the war machines in Europe were set moving it would be hard to halt them. It is known that several times already Hitler has been on the verge of marching in and that only the urgent pleas of Chamberlain have served to hold him back.

The implication of a joint official communique issued tonight is that, in any case, the dictator may refrain from use of force until the new Czech government has replied to proposals contained in a German memorandum, to be submitted to Prague through the agency of Chamberlain. One of the points covered in the memorandum is the withdrawal of Czech forces from the areas in Czechoslovakia ear-marked for the Reich. Another is cancellation of the Czech general mobilization order.

Let Nazis March In, Is Demand

Another demand was that Czechoslovakia permit German troops or the Sudeten Free Corps to march immediately into the border land which already has been sacrificed to the Reich by the Anglo-French peace plan.

There are reports also that support by Hitler of the Hungarian and Polish claims to Czechoslovak territory, played some role in the deadlock of the negotiations. Hitler, it is said, declined to guarantee the frontiers of Czechoslovakia without a settlement of the other minority problems of the country—with emphasis on Budapest's and Warsaw's demands for territory. It is not certain that these reports are correct.

One important point which is not clear is what now will become of the Paris-London plan—in view of the present virtual deadlock of negotiations.

The dramatic midnight interview followed a day of tense waiting during which Hitler and Chamberlain sent messages and messengers back and forth to each other across the Rhine.

During this time, Sir Horace Wilson, of Chamberlain's staff, and Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, crossed the Rhine for an interview with Joachim von Ribbentrop, aide of Hitler, at the Hotel Dreesen. The interview, with an intermission, lasted nearly two hours.

British Aides Arrange Hitler Interview

When the two men arrived back at the Hotel Petersburg soon before 8 p. m. their faces were grave and they seemed tired. Following a five-minute conference of the British party in the apartment of the prime minister, the British and American correspondents were summoned to the corridor outside the room.

Wilson came out, and with his eyes directed towards the floor, said: "I am afraid I have not much to tell you. As you know, Sir Nevile Henderson and I have been across to the Hotel Dreesen, where we have had a conversation—two conversations—with Herr von Ribbentrop. The present arrangement is that the prime minister will go across to the Dreesen later in the evening.

"He is going to the Dreesen to see the Fuehrer, I suppose," a correspondent ventured. "Well, he is not going across for the ferry ride," Sir Horace replied. "You speak of present arrangements," another correspondent said, "is there any chance of present arrangements changing?"

The spokesman answered, "in my experience, many things can change."

Then someone asked whether the reference to two conversations indicated there had been an intermission, Wilson replied, "Yes," implying that during the intermission, Von Ribbentrop was in conference with Hitler. Immediately it became clear that under "present arrangements" there was a breakdown in the negotiations. Yet it was also clear that if Hitler were to change his tack when Chamberlain went to the Hotel Dreesen to take his leave, the talks might go on.

Germans Crowd Chamberlain's Hotel

The real drama began this morning. Chamberlain was awaited at the Hotel Dreesen at 11:30 a. m. By 10 a. m. a crowd of Germans had begun to assemble before the Hotel Petersberg, to catch a glimpse of the prime minister, as he left for the Dreesen.

The inevitable S. S. men formed a cordon along the driveway.

At 10:45 the caravan of black cars with small Union Jacks and Swastika flags flying from the mudguards, drew up to be in readiness for the departure. A corporal's guard of honor—black-uniformed, steel-helmeted

O'Conor Group Claims Lead In Allegany

Sees 5-Vote Edge
Legality Questioned
Decision Delayed

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—Campaign headquarters for Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor claimed a 5-vote lead over Mayor Howard W. Jackson in a partial recount in Allegany County for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

If O'Conor succeeds in garnering the seven convention votes from the county he will have a clear title to the nomination, since he has previously been credited with 72 convention votes against 70 for Jackson.

The O'Conor group, led by William Curran, Baltimore political leader, claimed that a recount of 67 ballot boxes of the 73 in the county showed the 5-vote margin. The official canvass gave Jackson a 54-vote lead before O'Conor demanded the recount. Election officials at Cumberland declined to reveal the official result of the recount.

Attorneys for Mayor Jackson earlier questioned the legality of procedure used by the Baltimore City board of elections during the State primary, 11 days ago.

Stubs Destroyed

The Jackson attorneys asked that supervisors produce the coupons issued to voters in the polling places and which were presented at the voting machine to a judge who strung them on a wire before setting the machine so it could be operated.

The supervisors cannot produce the coupons, for they were burned after the polls closed, as stubs from paper ballots were burned in elections before voting machines were brought into use here.

Board officials said pressing duties probably would make it impossible for arguments to be heard on the protest before Wednesday—the day the Democratic nominating convention is scheduled to begin.

Decision Delayed

Joshua N. Warfield, Democratic State chairman, said, however, he would wait until next week before deciding whether to postpone the convention.

O'Conor swept all six city districts, winning the 42 convention votes from Baltimore. Jackson asked a recount in two districts, but it did not upset O'Conor's margin there.

The two recounts completed, in Garrett, Wicomico and Queen Anne's counties, did not change the official results. Jackson held Garrett and O'Conor maintained his hold on Wicomico's and Queen Anne's votes.

Million School Children Held Helped by WPA

Hopkins Sets Figure
Thousands Immunized

WPA's work relief program will directly benefit over 1,000,000 of the Nation's schoolchildren through an educational and health program, Administrator Hopkins said yesterday.

In practically every State, Hopkins said, needy children are being given physical check-ups, dental examinations, sight and hearing tests, and proper treatment. Thousands are being immunized against disease.

At the same time, he added, the WPA school lunch program, which in the past two years provided 125,000,000 hot lunches to undernourished pupils, is to be resumed. In many places community gardens operated by WPA workers have been harvested and the produce canned or preserved, to be served in the schools. WPA sewing rooms have accumulated quantities of warm clothing which will be distributed to the needy children.

In thousands of schools, many built through WPA, the program added new facilities, recreation and playground equipment, libraries, works of art, visual education aid, the administrator pointed out. The lunch program last year provided 15,000 women with work, and cost approximately $6,750,000.

"The WPA has been a powerful prop to education in many communities which have had to economize during recent years," declared Hopkins. "In re-establishing functions dropped by economy the WPA has not only helped the cause of education in maintaining its advances of the last decade, but frequently has extended them.

"For example, educators have long recognized that undernourished children are among the most backward in their classes. Practically every school has its quota of needy children who do not get enough nourishing food at home.

"In the last two years the WPA has prepared and served 125,000,000 nourishing, hot lunches to needy school children over the country. The results have been spectacular. Not only has the health of the children improved, but so has the quality of their work. It has actually been the determining factor in whether or not many of them would be able to attend school at all."

In the past two years also, he revealed, 940,000 children were given medical treatment and 550,000 immunized against disease.

Poor Haul Gripes 'New York' Bandit At Liquor Store

A well-built man with "a New York accent," last night escaped with an undetermined sum after holding up a clerk in People's Liquor Store, 1112 C street northwest.

The hold-up man stepped into the store five minutes before closing time, asked for a bottle of whisky, flashed a gun and forced the clerk to the back room. He rifled the cash register, commenting crisply over the "poor haul."

The clerk was Gilbert Cohen, of 1033 Quebec place northwest. It was the third time the store had been held up, according to Cohen.

753 Plebes Introduced at Naval Academy

New School Year Opens
1,559 Upper Classmen
Adm. Brown Officiates

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 23.—Plebe midshipmen were introduced to upper classmen today at the first formation of the Naval Academy year. Classes begin Monday.

The 753 new entrants faced the upper classmen for the first time at noon mess formation and were introduced by E. L. Beach, jr., of Palto Alto, Cal., commander of the midshipman regiment.

The plebes formed back-to-back while the other classmen observed their potentialities. There were 586 first classmen, 480 second and 493 third classmen who returned to the academy with hopes of graduating to man the new war vessels being built by the United States. The total of midshipmen is 2,312.

The plebes have been arriving for the past few days to be sworn in and learn how to wear the uniform. Most of the others arrived yesterday and today by train, family automobile and even jalopies.

Like any other group of college boys, their suit cases were plastered with labels. But the midshipmen labels were of a more cosmopolitan type. Senior and junior classmen, who made a training cruise during the summer to Europe, had labels from England, France and other countries.

As is customary and proper, the plebes will be ignored until they find their bearings, or until a haughty upper classman deigns to tell them the tales of the midshipmen cruise. The plebes must be drilled in the school of soldier, taught Academy songs, steeped in naval tradition and learn the numerous do's and don'ts of the Academy, as well as pass their difficult studies, before they can participate in a midshipman cruise.

Like the upper classmen, they came from all 48 States, Hawaii and Alaska. Officers away on leave also returned today for the Navy-William and Mary game tomorrow.

The official routine will begin with study hours Sunday evening, and recitations, drills, etc., will go on in regular order on Monday.

Both Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the Academy, and Capt. Milo F. Draemel, commandant of midshipmen, officiated in their capacities for the first time at the opening of a school year, both having been assigned to their present positions after the opening of the last academic session.

Keedysville Area Has Earliest Snow Squall on Record

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keedysville, Md., Sept. 23.—J. A. Miller, government weather observer here for the last 35 years, went through his records today but failed to find any snow had ever fallen here as early as yesterday's squall.

Arthur L. Towson, Smithburg business man, reported driving through a snow squall for five minutes at the base of the mountain near Cavetown. The earliest snow of any consequence here was on October 30, 1925, when Mr. Miller said his record book showed a two-inch snow. There have been traces of snow during the last week in September on several occasions, he said.

Fredericksburg To Index Records As WPA Project

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—William A. Smith, State Works Progress administrator, said today a $4,980 project to prepare a group of indices for the city of Fredericksburg had been approved.

The indices of court and city council records will cover a period of more than 150 years.

The WPA is supplying $4,677 for the project and the sponsors, $303.

Hagerstown, Sept. 23.—Thomas M. Simpson, named acting postmaster of Hagerstown, has resigned as a member of the Board of License Commissioners for Washington County. Mr. Simpson, who managed Representative David J. U. S. Court Gets 1st Test Case Of New AAA

Tobacco Section Hit
Based on Penalty Tax
Interstate Clause Cited

By the Associated Press.

Valdosta, Ga., Sept. 23.—A three-judge Federal court today took under advisement the first test of the constitutionality of the 1938 agricultural adjustment act, based on a challenge of the penalty taxes assessed tobacco growers selling above limits fixed in marketing quotas.

Attorneys for both sides were granted four days to file additional briefs. No indication was given as to when a decision would be announced.

The suit was instituted in Georgia State courts to prevent warehousemen from collecting the penalty tax and turning it over to the United States Department of Agriculture. Later they were transferred to Federal court to hasten an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The actions contended the AAA of 1938, under which marketing was fixed for the Nation's principal crops, was unconstitutional in that "Congress assumes authorities not directly granted by the Constitution."

Growers also asserted tobacco growing was not an interstate industry and therefore was not subject to Federal regulation.

A. J. Little, one of the attorneys bringing the suit, estimated Georgia and Florida growers would have to pay penalties totaling about $4,500,000 if the act were upheld.

Regulations of the marketing act provide a tax of 50 per cent of the market price, or 3 cents a pound on grades of 6 cents or under, for all tobacco sold in excess of individual quotas.

Three attorneys came here from Washington to represent the Government. They were Robert Shields and W. C. Hunter of the Solicitor's office of the Agriculture Department, and J. F. L. Yost of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice.

Bankers Offer To Finance Two Bridges for Md.

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—Maryland and New York banking interests completed plans today to offer the Public Works Administration complete assurance of their willingness to finance at least two of the four bridges in the State's $30,000,000 bridge construction program.

Admitting the PWA appeared ready to finance a span over the Susquehanna River, the group refused to concede the State had lost out on chances for Federal aid in building a second bridge over the Potomac River near Morgantown.

Under present plans, no further effort would be made to press for a bridge across the Patapsco River at Baltimore and a span over Chesapeake Bay, although it was understood unofficially here the War Department had approved those projects as well as the other two.

B. Howell Griswold, Jr., of the Alexander Brown Co., of Baltimore, fiscal advisers to the State roads commission, declined to comment on the new plans except to say "we haven't given up hope."

J. Glenn Beall, chairman of the roads commission, likewise expressed belief the Potomac River span might be saved, making 50 per cent of the bridge program possible.

One remaining obstacle in the program is a case now pending before the court of appeals involving constitutionality of the revenue bonds. Should the high court hold the bonds illegal, the entire program would collapse.

Scores See Fiesta Of Holy Rosary

Holy Rosary's annual fiesta, now in progress in the nearly-completed $18,000 parish hall at Third and F streets northwest, last night again drew scores of Italian parishioners, who participated in bingo and other games.

Having been presented with a $500 check by the congregation the previous evening, the Rev. Nicholas De Carlo, only pastor of the church in its twenty-five year history, was wearing a broad grin at the fete, which is being given for the benefit of the new parish auditorium.

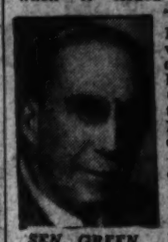

The festival, which will be concluded next Wednesday night, has as chairman, Miss Matilda Maisti. Her aides are Joseph Basso, Bruno Landi, Jennie Peluso, Michael Chiesa and Mrs. Mary Peretti. The new parish building is expected to be completed the latter part of October, and dedicated about December 1, the congregation's twenty-fifth anniversary.

Attack on New Deal Stirs Dispute
Chandler Poisoning Inquiry Closed

Whether the Republican National Committee intended to criticize some 37 New Deal laws when it issued its booklet, "Promise and Performance," was heatedly disputed by leaders of the G. O. P. and the Democratic Party yesterday.

SEN. GREEN

Senator Theodore F. Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, issued a statement saying the Republican committee "has just attempted an extraordinary about-face" and concluded that the party "is still torn between the conflicting views of the reactionaries, who wish to condemn everything done by the New Deal, and the mild liberals, who would rather make the party conform to the progressive spirit of the times."

On the other hand, John Hamilton, G. O. P. national chairman, in a Chicago address, took Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic Senate leader, to task for saying the booklet's assertion that the laws had "interfered" with private management of business meant the Republicans favored repeal of the measures. He said the party was not opposed to stock-market regulation, and that it was Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who sponsored the act for Federal insurance of bank deposits. He added that Republicans do not want to repeal the social security act, but did hold the "reserve fund" provision was a grave mistake.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 23 (AP).—The Jefferson county grand jury closed its investigation today into reports that Gov. A. B. Chandler was poisoned during the primary campaign with the statement it found no evidence of "any wrongdoing."

After reviewing evidence submitted by half a dozen witnesses, the jury informed Judge Loraine Mix that "it is needless to say that we have not considered an indictment of any person, even for negligence."

Laboratory tests by Dr. Harry M. Weeter, made at request of Dr. James W. Bryan, hotel physician at the time, and Dr. C. W. Dowden, the jury report said, gave negative reports "and showed no metallic or chemical poisoning."

Word from New York that John J. O'Connor, House Rules Committee head, defeated in the Administration "purge" in New York's primary elections would run in the general election as an independent, caused new speculation on what awaited him in Congress should he be successful.

To obtain recognition as a Democrat, after being elected as and independent, he would have to have his claim approved by the Democratic caucus. Should he overcome that obstacle and be admitted back into the party fold, his Rules committee chairmanship still would be in doubt, since the Ways and Means committee appoints all committees and designates chairmen.

Five Democratic vacancies on the Ways and Means group are to be filled when Congress meets, and for the first time the House leadership is expected to take a hand in appointments to that committee, especially if O'Connor is elected and seeks his old chairmanship.

Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, said last night that "we are seeking a people's government, democracy, work in America under President Roosevelt."

In a radio speech over the Columbia Broadcasting System, she said charges that the President was a dictator were false propaganda. She asserted that Thomas Mann, German writer and refugee from dictatorship in the Reich, described the President as a "genuine servant of liberty."

Sheboygan, Wis., Sept. 23 (AP).—Gov. Philip F. La Follette, head of the National Progressives of America, Inc., last night warned the Wisconsin Federation of Labor against a false feeling of security.

"I hope we can begin thinking in terms of problems instead of personalities," La Follette said. "We are too apt to elect a man like Roosevelt to office and then forget the problems of the next four years. * * * We cannot maintain the American system with one-third to half of our able-bodied out of production.

The final official count was Bancroft, 295,751; Riley, 292,940—a margin of only 2,811 votes.

Norman Davis Pleads for Aid To Red Cross

Drive Begins Today
Planes Open Roll Call
D. C. Members Hailed

Hailing the Red Cross as a "beacon of hope in this period of great disturbance in human affairs," Chairman Norman Davis of the national organization appealed last nightto the residents of the National Capital for their whole-hearted support during the annual drive for members which begins today.

The roll call will be opened officially this afternoon at 1 p. m. when 111 planes from the aircraft carriers Yorktown and Enterprise, now at Norfolk, Va., fly over the city in the formation of a cross.

In his radio address, Davis declared, "the world sorely needs the human understanding, the kindly action, the sharing of burdens which the Red Cross stands for everywhere."

Joining in the plea, Edgar Morris, chairman of the roll call here, said he was looking forward to the enrollment of more than 100,000 members here.

Pointing out that there are nearly 4,000 Red Cross units throughout the country, he stated, "the District of Columbia stands at the top of the list in membership. We have a larger proportion of population enrolled as members than any other city."

Earl A. Nash, vice charman of the roll call, also urged Washington members to join the Red Cross. Te emphasized that "we are not so far inland and we are not so secure that the hurricane might not have hit our town with as much force and as much terror, loss of human life and loss of property as New England has suffered."

The first member enrolled in the drive was Miss Elizabeth Reed, Queen of the President's Cup Regatta, and the second membership went to James A. Councilor, general chairman of the hegatta. The ceremony, attended by the Queen's court, took place last night at the Red Cros Chapter House, 1730 E street northwest, immediately after the Regatta parade, in which a Red Cross float depicted the first aid and life saving services performed by the agency.

WPA Rolls Reach New Peak for 4th Consecutive Week

By the Associated Press.

The WPA announced yesterday its enrollment has reached a new peak for the fourth consecutive week—3,102,062.

This figure, as of September 10, compared with a previous peak of slightly more than 3,000,000 in February, 1936. On September 11, last year, enrollment stood at 1,458,830.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins had said he did not expect WPA rolls to go beyond 3,100,000 on the current program.

While the new thousands were being added week by week, other records showed that 166,000 dropped off work relief rolls in July. WPA officials said many of them had found private employment and Aubrey Williams, acting administrator, commented that hardly more than half the new enrollees had ever been WPA clients previously.

"These facts indicate that WPA is fulfilling its mission of supplying temporary employment in periods of emergency rather than "careers," as has frequently been charged," Williams asserted.

Tubercular Adults to Go To Glenn Dale Child Wards

stand by the department's tuberculosis advisory committee.

Allen has since resigned as a member of the Board of District Commissioners.

It was learned last night that Dr. Ruhland renewed the request upon notification by Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the tuberculosis bureau, that there are 16 adults, principally white males, in dire need of hospitalization, but no space was available for them at either Glenn Dale Sanatorium or Gallinger Hospital.

Bed space, especially for white and colored men, in the adult ward at Glenn Dale has been at a premium ever since it was opened a year ago. Meantime, however, occupancy of the 296-bed juvenile building has rarely exceeded 200, the actual count yesterday.

"In admitting a limited number of adult emergency cases to the children's ward, cases that otherwise would continue to constitute a peril to their families and the community if they had to remain at home, strict precautions will be taken," Dr. Ruhland declared.

"Step to Meet Emergency"

"Nationally-known authorities on tuberculosis, as well as our own advisory committee, are agreed no risk is involved. Adults placed in the juvenile wing will be in rooms to themselves, on the first floor, and there will be no mingling of young and old patients.

"This step is being taken to meet a grave emergency. As conditions are now, there are many men and women tuberculosis sufferers who should be in an institution, not only for their own sakes but to protect children in the household, but there is simply no place to put them."

He said he expects the first admissions to be made tomorrow.

By inter-institution shifting, the emergency plan may make possible the removal from the medical wards of Gallinger Hospital of at least five tuberculosis patients who are there, contrary to sound hospital technique, because there is no room for them in the proper wing.

Dr. Coulter hailed the commissioners' approval of Dr. Ruhland's request, pointing out subdivision of the juvenile sanatorium, while not a complete solution of the housing problem, will mean much to the 16 men and women who are "must" on the waiting list.

The tuberculosis bureau, he asserted, is making good progress in a case tracing campaign launched last fall, but "what good is it to uncover cases requiring hospitalization if there is no place to send them?"

Glenn Dale Sanatorium and Gallinger Hospital, which are maintained by the District government, are the only local institutions accepting tuberculosis cases.

Roosevelt Gets Brownlow Advice

President Roosevelt yesterday conferred for the second time within a few weeks with members of the Brownlow committee which drafted the report on which last session's reorganization bill was based.

Neither Louis Brownlow, chairman of the committee, nor Charles E. Merriam, Government organization expert, would say whether the President indicated whether he was preparing another reorganization bill. Brownlow said one phase of the discussion was planning. Associates of the President, however, were confident that the President had not abandoned the reorganization plan and would ask the next Congress to enact a reorganization bill unless the outbreak of war abroad pushed neutrality legislation and international affairs to the fore to the exclusion of domestic reforms.

Also on the agenda is consideration of possible appointees to the Supreme Court vacancy and a resolution supporting the peace policy of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull.

Receipts Pay Off Park Meter Cost In Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Sept. 23.—Hagerstown will make its tenth and last payment on 115 parking meters October 1, after which time they will become the property of the city. Each meter has been averaging $9 monthly, half of which amount has been applied to paying the cost of $7,455. The first meters were installed December 11, 1937, and another group of 85 four months ago.

Mayor W. Lee Elgin said he expects an average net profit from the parking meters of between $15,000 and $20,000 annually, most of which will be applied to municipal contributions to the Washington County Hospital. Orphans Home and several charitable institutions, which heretofore have received contributions from the regular tax levy.

Europe Traffic Laws Praised By Mrs. Thorpe

Stricter Rules Abroad Auto Club Board Meets Hears A.A.A. Safety Aide

By Howard F. Wentworth.

If pedestrians in Washington think they are abused, they should visit Europe and see what happens to anyone who ignores rules of safe walking, said Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman of the A. A. A. women's safety committee, yesterday.

Speaking at the auto club's advisory board meeting in the Willard Hotel, Mrs. Thorpe—who recently returned from a European tour—described foreign traffic control methods as far superior to those in this country.

While pedestrian control laws have been repeatedly vetoed by District heads, although walkers comprise 75 per cent of the casualty toll, Mrs. Thorpe told of drastic, but successful, methods of curbing pedestrian deaths in Germany. In Berlin, she said, the man who disobeys a traffic regulation while walking is dealt with on the spot. He is not hauled into court, but is fined by the policeman who observes his act.

Handed Set of Rules

Similar methods are in force throughout the urban sections of Europe, said Mrs. Thorpe, and in some instances the offender is handed a written set of safety rules, along with the receipt for his fine.

She gave three reasons for high safety records in many foreign cities. The first, she said, was the ample distribution of pedestrian safety islands on congested, heavily-traveled streets.

The second, she pointed out, is the large police personnel in major cities. In London, said Mrs. Thorpe, there is one policeman to every 167 automobiles. All traffic officers, she said, are trained in courteous and efficient methods of handling the public.

The third reason is the driving skill of Europeans, said Mrs. Thorpe. Motorists are carefully instructed in safe driving rudiments and examinations for licenses often take three hours to complete.

There Is No Speed Limit

There is no speed limit on any European road, Mrs. Thorpe added. Responsibility for safe and sane driving is placed "squarely upon the shoulders of motorists," she said.

The meeting also was given a description of the new Pan-American highway—from Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City—by John Nolan, jr., director of planning, National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Reports on growth of the local A. A. A. Club were also made. Guests included Engineer Commissioner David McCouch, jr., Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

The G. O. P. cafeteria was closed Monday when kitchen and steamtable help struck for a $15 weekly minimum wage and an 8-hour day.

Traffic Court Throws Out Parsons Case

Representative Cleared Ice Cream Vendor Hurt Other Mishaps Occur

After 11 continuances, the traffic troubles of Representative Claude V. Parsons (Democrat), of Illinois, and Albert Nesbitt, an attorney, of Cleveland, were settled by Judge Edward M. Curran in Traffic Court yesterday.

Charges of pulling from the curb without a proper hand signal, pending against Nesbitt since last February, were dismissed. When the case was called, neither witnesses nor policemen involved in the incident were present.

Judge Curran concluded the final chapter of a long standing controversy between the legislator, Nesbitt and his sister, Margaret Ellis, of 2603 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Representative Parsons had been charged with leaving the scene of an accident after Nesbitt and Miss Ellis accused him of colliding with their car as it pulled from the curb on Connecticut avenue. The case haunted Traffic Court until charges against the lawmaker were nolle prossed by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal in April. Judge Curran decided yesterday to close the issue for good, and called the whole thingoff.

Meanwhile yesterday, a man was injured seriously in one of a series of mishaps on District streets.

Harry Brown, 54-year-old ice cream vendor of 1319 Tenth street northwest, suffered a fractured hip when knocked down while pushing his cart near Fourteenth and L streets northwest. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital. Allan J. Croner, 32, of Baltimore, accused of striking the man, was charged with reckless driving.

Eight-year-old Walter Carpenter, of 655 E street northeast, suffered a fractured collar bone when he fell from his bicycle near his home.

Three persons received minor injuries in a collision at Sixteenth street and South Carolina avenue southeast. Those injured passengers in a Gospel Mission truck were Leonard Faircloth, 23, and Charles McCoy, both of 214 John Marshall place northwest. Harry Gladman, 63, of 308 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, driver of the other car, was injured in the back.

Struck by an auto yesterday afternoon at Fourteenth and G streets northwest, where he is stationed as a newsboy, Benjamin Eppessy, 26, of 1323 Belmont street northwest, was slightly injured. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Knocked down near his home, James R. Holland, colored, 5, of 1315 T street northwest, received head injuries.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced yesterday that a system of colored windshield stickers will be employed to designate safe and unsafe cars after the new compulsory inspection law becomes effective March 1.

Autos which do not at first meet requirements, he said, will carry a a red, diamond-shaped sticker informing the public that the driver has been given ten days in which to make necessary repairs or take his car from the streets.

A round, blue sticker will be used to indicate a car has been examined and found in perfect condition. Drivers who fail to pass the first test will be permitted to return within ten days for another examination. If an "O. K." is given, the red seal will be removed and replaced by a blue.

Berlin Press Attacks Soviet, Czechs Anew

Charges 'Sabotage' Rails at 'Invasion' Boerse Stocks Slump

Berlin, Sept. 23.—Prague and Moscow are sabotaging the Franco-British plan and Hitler-Chamberlain "peace talks," the German newspapers asserted today when they violently attacked the Czechoslovak government, this time because of the "invasion" of Sudeten German territory by Czech troops.

Bloody clashes last night, which were described at length, at a number of places from which reports, on the withdrawal of Czech troops were sent out, earlier yesterday, were ascribed to "terrorism" exercised again by the "Czech military rabble."

Fifty were reported killed as a result of the Czech doings. It was not made clear whether this figure includes only Sudeten Germans. But it was clear from the reports of clashes on Sudeten territory, that members of the Sudeten free corps—the body conscripted by the Reich on German soil—responded to the Czech fire.

Slump on Boerse

There was a slump of the Berlin Boerse, where leading issues lost between 5 and 6 points.

Ten railroad lines connecting Germany and Czechoslovakia were reported out of function, allegedly as a result of the Czech's blowing up bridges and tearing up rails near the border. The front page of the "Berliner Tageblatt" is headed by an appeal for help, "against Bolshevist terror," which refugees from Graslitz addressed to Hitler and Chamberlain.

Under the page 1 streamer, "Insolent Soviet Note to Poland," the official German news agency reported from Warsaw that the Polish government has rejected the Soviet demarche, threatening to cancel their nonaggression pact with Poland, if Polish troops would invade Czechoslovak territory.

Syrovy Caricatured

The front page of tomorrow's Voelkischer Beobachter bears a caricature of Gen. Syrovy, armed with a revolver and a hand grenade, planting his feet on two prostrate bodies, presumably Germans. The cartoon bears the headline, "Mass Murderer Syrovy, a Creature of Moscow."

Other newspapers had streamer headlines, such as "900,000 Czechs Under Arms—Sudeten Germans Appeal to the Fuehrer and Chamberlain," "Poland Increases Her Demands—New Sufferings for the Tortured Sudentenland," "Czech Military Dictatorship Establishes a Regime of Terror," "Moscow's New Order to Prague: Give the Masses Arms—Hungary and Poland Forward Their Claims," "Prague Completely Under Moscow's Dictation—Soviet Embassy Orders Force—New Prime Minister Agitating in Soviet Meetings."

there were no overt acts from the Czechs or their allies.

British Fear Putsch

Even so the British are worried lest Hitler execute another of his notorious week-end putschs. It is not only the thought of Hitler entering Bohemia that haunts the British, but the fear the German, Polish and Hungarian armies will act in concert and attempt to overrun Czechoslovakia altogether.

Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary, invited the Polish ambassador to Downing street and warned him of the possible consequences of Polish intervention. Poland's answer is said to have been a promise to be good.

The French prime minister, Edouard Daladier, may fly to London to hear from Chamberlain the full story of his second meeting with Hitler and to await the cabinet's reaction to any new peace proposal or compromise.

The official gloom increased shortly before midnight when the ticker in the foreign office tapped out the solemn news that the reorganized Prague government had broadcast an order for general mobilization with all eligible men to be at their posts within six hours.

Pilots Stand By

The four senior pilots of the British Airways who took Chamberlain and his party to the Rhine, have received orders to stand by at Cologne tomorrow morning. They will fly Chamberlain back to Heston Airport before lunch tomorrow.

The Prime Minister will confer with his inner cabinet immediately upon his return to London and a full meeting of the cabinet is anticipated later in the day. The inner cabinet includes Lord Halifax, Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare.

Lord Halifax conferred at the Foreign Office tonight with Sir John Simon and Sir Thomas Inskip. Leslie-Hore-Belisha, the war minister, who had passed the night at Talisbury, was recalled to London this evening and wasted no time boarding a plane.

Whitehall Demonstration

Many Londoners went to bed tonight with the feeling that war was only a few days away—perhaps it might come before they woke up.

Meanwhile, critics of the Hitler-Chamberlain deal demonstrated again tonight in Whitehall and extra police were summoned to clear Downing street.

The Whitehall crowd of 1,500, mostly Laborites and Communists, was kept quiet except for occasional shouts of "Stand by the Czechs" and "Recall Parliament." Things picked up after dinner when a counter-demonstration was made by hundreds of young men and women who gave the Fascist salute each time they paraded past the cenotaph.

Shout for Mosley

Black Shirts, who last demonstrated in Whitehall at the time of the abdication crisis, when they were on King Edward's side, tonight shouted: "Mosley, Mosley! We want peace; Britons fight for Britain only!" Other slogans were "No war for Czechoslovakia" and "Conscript the Jews."

The police left the Black Shirts alone for a while until the traffic congestion became acute. Then mounted police were summoned to disperse the demonstrators. A number of arrests were made after scrimmages.

Visitors at the foreign office today included Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer; Maj. Clement Richard Attlee and Arthur Greenwood, the labor leaders, and Charles Corbin, the French Ambassador.

Worried About U. S. Opinion

Government officials are worried about the adverse effect of the Hitler-Chamberlain deal on American public opinion. This criticism, of course, is bound to cool off the propaganda for "parallel action" between the "two great democracies." As an indication America might strive to avoid foreign entanglements in the future, attention is called to the break in the almost daily visits which the American Ambassador used to pay to Downing street.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the liberal opposition in Parliament, declared today he was resolved to stand firmly "in these critical times for the principles of law and justice as opposed to enmity and brute force in international relationships."

Recall Demanded

The Bishop of Bradford, the Right Rev. A. W. F. Blunt, whose sermon precipitated the abdication crisis, commented: "Europe is still reaping the results of the seeds of hatred, revenge and fear which were sown by an unjust peace and a foolish treatment of Germany after the war."

The Chamberlain government's policy of "seeking peace by surrender to force" was repudiated by the League of Nations Union, which asserted such a policy was "disastrous for British interest . . . and whatever may be its immediate result, will in the end lead to war." The union requested the publication of the full text of the Hitler-Chamberlain proposals and the immediate recall of Parliament.

Parliament is expected to meet next Tuesday or Thursday.

Silence in Bermuda

Hamilton, Bermuda, Sept. 23 (U.P.). Dockyard officials announced tonight "no further movements of ships of the British navy will be published for the time being," although the announcement said there are now no ships of the America and West Indies squadron in Bermuda.

The announcement led observers to believe British warships ordinarily stationed in this area may be ordered elsewhere hurriedly from their present cruises in the West Indies and South America.

turbances and no fighting. I want to emphasize that this is because it was not taken or occupied by the Free Corps but by the Sudenten Party."—Editor's note.]

Earlier, the Czech army recaptured today most of the border towns it gave up yesterday without a struggle. The troops moved out from behind their fortifications to take possesion of every square foot of Czechoslovak soil, except the neck of land in the west stretching from Asch (As) to Rossbach. They moved in on Eger (Cheb) and Franzansbad (Frantiskovy Lazne), and the ominous rumbling of their tanks did the job. The Nazis gave up without a struggle and, while their leaders fled to Germany, the people pulled in their Swastika flags.

Czechoslovak soldiers were resisted at Graslitz (Kraslice), and six were killed and 17 injured. Two Nazi storm troopers were killed when the cars in which they were riding with others collided with a tank. Several Sudeten Germans were killed defending a barricade before the town hall.

Swastikas Torn Down

Falkenau (Falnov) and Gablonz (Jablonec), northeast of Prague, also were taken. Local and state police at Gablonz arrested 16 Nazis and tore down Swastika flags hanging from public buildings. Similar scenes took place in other northern and southern towns along the German border.

General Syrovy is determined to have Czech tricolor flag flying over all Czechoslovakia except around Asch. There he feared trouble if troops attacked, because of reports that German divisions were on guard just over the frontier.

As early as a week ago last Monday night, the night that Chancellor Adolf Hitler spoke at Nuremberg, Gen. Syrovy and other army leaders, including Gen. Ludwig Jan Krejci, chief of the general staff, issued orders for partial moblization. Since that time men have slowly been coming to the colors—slowly because the government was anxious not to provoke anger on the other side of the border. Now that mobilization is being speeded. The government and the army feel there is no time to lose.

This is a difficult moment for Czechoslovakia, the people are overjoyed. They are shaking hands with men they have never seen before. They are singing; they are hurrying about the streets; they are patting each other on the back, they are ready.

But they do not know what is going on outside the capital. The news coming in is meager. After 10:30 p. m. (4:30 p. m., Eastern standard time) tonight no telephone calls were allowed outside the country except those for the state.

Czechs Called Dynamiters

Berlin (Saturday), Sept. 24 (U.P.). The official D. N. B. Agency reported today a truck manned by eight Czech army sappers and loaded with explosives was stopped 150 meters inside German territory near Neustadt, Upper Silesia. Police arrested the Czechs, who allegedly had orders to "dynamite structures in German territory."

"Last Card," Says Henlein

Berlin (Saturday), Sept. 24 (U.P.). Konrad Henlein tonight issued a proclamation to his Sudentens saying that the Czech government had "thrown its last card onto the table" by ordering mobilization.

The proclamation said:

"Suported by an unconstitutional military government he (President Benes) ordered general mobilization. You, my comrades of the homeland, know what is happening.

"No German will shoot Germans, no Magyar will shoot Magyars and no Pole will shoot Poles. Benes has no right to force you to terrible fratricide.

"No German will obey his mobilization order. In a short time you will be free."

Insurgents Halt Loyalist Drive

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish frontier), Sept. 23 (AP).—Spanish government dispatches reported tonight the insurgent command had been forced to throw reinforcements into the Javalambre Mountains to halt a government drive toward the Teruel-Saguno highway, 50 miles norhwest of Valencia.

Insurgent dispatches said the government's push was checked completely, but the government indicated the drive had relieved some pressure on the Ebro River front, more than 110 miles to the northeast of Manzanera.

Tobacco Spitter Sets New Mark With 18-Foot Shot

Fisherville, Va., Sept. 23 (AP)—Jasper Davis, defending champion, bettered his last year's mark by a good six inches at the South River District Fair today.

His new mark: 18 feet.

David McChesney captured runner-up honors with 17 feet 4 inches.

Grey Veteran Dies

Woodstock, Va., Sept. 23.—Atwell W. Frye, 95-year-old Confederate veteran, died at his home here tonight. He served in Company H, Eleventh Virginia Cavalry.

Baltimore Officer Says Policemen Are Poor Shots

Speaking yesterday at the University of Maryland's traffic school at College Park, Capt. James Downs, Baltimore Police Department ballistics expert, declared poor marksmanship was a common failing among policemen in the United States.

Capt. Downs said 75 per cent of the police officers couldn't hit the figure of a man at 60 feet with a service gun.

The fault, he said, was not with the policemen but the lack of instruction. A policeman's ability to snoot straight is still his best bet in protecting the public safety.

Daladier Pledges War If Nazis March

making a final effort for peace, but if a coup de force is attempted against Czechoslovakia, France will keep her engagements. France has attained the extreme limit of concessions."

The French premier also is understood to have informed the radical delegation that in event of a German invasion of Czechoslovakia, Parliament would be summoned forthwith "to take its responsibilities." For while the French government can order a general mobilization, only Parliament can declare war.

A French foreign office spokesman said this evening that after Czechoslovakia had agreed to cession of her German population, nobody now could ascribe aggressive intentions to her if it came to a war, and Hitler's responsibility for the conflict would be clearly established before the entire world.

The Czech government, it was stated, was entirely justified in exercising legal authority in Sudeten German territories until the international committee, which the Anglo-French proposed to set up, had delineated the new frontier. The object of this plan, the spokesman said, was to prevent resort to force, and not to legalize Hitler's employment of it.

The stiffening of the French attitude which has been clearly noticeable in the last two or three days is due in no little part to the categorical affirmation by Maxim Litvinov that Soviet Russia would intervene on behalf of Czechoslocakia if France lived up to her obligations.

The defeatist spirit that dominated the French cabinet in its meeting on September 13 and resulted in the Chamberlain-Daladier capitulation before Hitler, arose largely from a misrepresentation of the Soviet position, which was given by the Foreign Minister, Georges Bonnet, to his colleagues the day after he saw the Soviet diplomat at Geneva.

The Soviet government's prompt action today in informing Warsaw that if the Polish army dare fall on Czechoslovakia in the flank, Russia will denounce its non-aggression pact with Poland, is regarded here as a particularly helpful action.

What purports to be the opinion of the French general staff with regard to the outcome of a war with Germany at the present time is given by Henri de Kerellis in L'Epoque which often reflects the view of the French high command. According to Kerellis, Gen. Vuillemin, head of the French air force, admits the "enormous superiority the German aviation will have at the outset of the conflict."

"But," continued Kerellis, "the generalissimo whose duty it is to collect information and to know the facts not only about the French army but the German army and who bears the entire responsibility, namely, Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, has assured the minister of foreign affairs (I have it on my word of honor from Bonnet himself) of his 'absolute confidence of the outcome of a war' if unfortunately it were to break out."

Demonstrations outside all the Paris factories in behalf of Czechoslovakia were held this evening by the workers on instructions from the French federation of trade unions. They voted resolutions confirming their solidarity with the Czech Republic in the crisis which later were carried to the Czech delegation by the delegation of workers.

French Sentries Pall Rhine

Strasbourg, France, Sept. 23 (AP). French troops kept watch on the Rhine tonight under a "state of alert" proclaimed during a day of foreboding diplomatic activity in Europe's capitals.

On the French side sentries paced the river bank and all frontier forces were confied to their combat positions.

Hitler

At 11:20 a minor member of the prime minister's entourage made his appearance there. Questioned as to the reason for the delay, he replied: "The prime minister has had his breakfast." This, it was learned, consisted of tea, toast and butter, and cold sliced ham.

Exactly at 11:22 a. m. Humphreys-Davies, Chamberlain's private secretary, came down the elevator, and invited the few newspapermen present to meet him in the writing room. A laconic typed statement which he produced from his pocket, read:

"The prime minister has sent a letter to the German chancellor this morning, to which, it is understood, Herr Hitler is replying.

Sometime later the newspapers correspondents were told Chamberlain's letter had been dispatched across the river at 10:30 a. m. by courier.

Suspense Continues

Scenes similar to those in the morning recurred in the afternoon. Once again a throng assembled before the Petersburg and the black-uniformed cordon was formed. Since Chamberlain apparently had agreed to talk for a newsreel, the necessary apparatus was set up in the drive way.

Even the caravan of black cars reappeared. But again there was delay. Among the camp followers in the Petersburg lobby a difference of opinion arose as to whether Chamberlain already had received a reply from Hitler. Again there had been couriers over the Rhine, but there was no indication for a time whether they were carrying a dispatch.

Among the cars which speeded away from the hotel Dreesen, crossed the Rhine, and mounted the hill to the Petersberg, was one carrying Dr. Schmidt, official interpreter. That was between three and four o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. Schmidt, it was discovered, carried the response.

The next incident came soon before six p. m., when Sir Horace Wilson and Ambassador Henderson crossed from the British to the German headquarters—for a conference with Von Ribbentrop as it turned out later. This visit proved to be one of the crucial episodes of the day.

Hitler Visit Still Uncertain

The suspense was still great, since for more than an hour afterwards there was some uncertainty as to whether Chamberlain actually would visit Hitler at all before his threatened departure for London. But at 9:45 p. m. correspondents were told by a secretary from the British headquarters: "The prime minister will leave for the Hotel Dreesen at 10:20—you have time for another drink at the bar."

At 10:08 Chamberlain appeared at the head of the broad staircase. As he walked down, followed by nearly all the members of his staff, he was smiling. He wore a black top coat over his black semiformal afternoon outfit—he had not had time to change to evening clothes, it was said.

One or two of the Germans in the lobby shouted: "Hoch heil!" there was some applause. Still smiling, Chamberlain made a gesture of recognition with his hand. In the driveway there was a guttural command. The steel-helmeted guards presented arms. Chamberlain and the others entered the cars and drove off into the darkness. The prime minister of Great Britain was on his way down the hill to see the new war lord of Europe.

Hungary Cabinet Meets; Rumor Has Army Mobilized

Budapest (Saturday), Sept. 24 (AP). The Hungarian cabinet went into session last night after a general mobilization order in Czechoslovakia was broadcast and was still in session at 1:30 a. m. today as rumors circulated that this country would take like action.

Although the Hungarian mobilization rumor was officially denied, military barracks were filled with newcomers who had received orders to report to their regiments at once.

The railroad stations were crowded and scenes reminiscent of 1914 were enacted as men bid farewell to their wives, mothers, sisters and sweethearts.

A Hungarian "free corps" numbering 2,000 men already had departed for the Czechoslovak frontier beyond which live 700,000 Hungarians.

All street lights in Budapest were ordered turned off and all windows had to be darkened, although a foreign office spokesman said there was no danger of immediate air attack.

other forms of transportation, concern was expressed lest Americans have difficulty in leaving the country.

Registration figures indicated 5,190 Americans were in the little republic on January 1, but this total did not include tourists passing through or tarrying there briefly.

Exists Considered

It was pointed out that the German border offers the quickest means of evacuation, as the most thickly settled regions are accessible, but escape there might be barred by a German invasion.

Although Carr warned departure "might become impossible" under some conditions, the department did not elaborate on the hazards of leaving the country. It was apparent, however, that if Hungary and Poland also attacked Czechoslovakia, those outlets might be barred.

The situation abroad may bring cancellation of the President's plans to return to Hyde Park Thursday. On the advice of his doctor, Mr. Roosevelt did not leave the White House yesterday for his regular executive office press conference, but his secretary, Stephen T. Early, said the Hyde Park visit was contingent on developments abroad.

Reviews Situation

Mr. Roosevelt received Baruch before again reviewing the European situation at a Cabinet session. Baruch, who on his recent return from Euope said the peace of the world lay in Hitler's hands and criticized the German chancellor, gave the President his view of the situation abroad.

Asked if he would head a new economic defense committee, Baruch told reporters:

"Those are matters for the President to discuss. All that I can say is that we discussed world economics."

Secretary Morgenthau's request that Dr. Viner return to his Treasury post to consult with the Secretary on financial aspects of the international situation followed Morgenthau's announced policy of maintaining constant contact with the best informed economic authorities.

When Viner, at odds with the spending policy, resigned last April, he said he was "tired of his job."

He said then he had decided "that the thing for me to do was to get out of the Treasury, come back to the University of Chicago, and leave the salvation of the world to others."

Treasury officials have repeatedly said they were not concerned at the situation growing out of the flood of refugee foreign capital to this country, and a high Administration official has said there would be no closing of American stock exchanges if war breaks out.

Barred from American loans by the Johnson act, America's war debtors are expected to rely heavily on the invested capital of their nationals here for credit for purchases, in event of war.

The Commerce Department yesterday reported $130,914,078 in gold imports, a five-year record, in the week ended September 16. The Government has acquired $452,956,517 of the metal in three weeks.

berg conversations, at best, can bring but a partial solution of the Czech crisis. In the view of the Polish government a partial solution is no solution at all. This country insists that only an integral solution of the Czechoslovakian problem can bring about the pacification of Europe and an integral solution calls for the satisfaction of Polish and Hungarian wishes as well as those of Germany."

The Russian note to Poland was delivered to the Polish charge d'affaires in Moscow and immediately communicated to Warsaw where the government indignantly prepared its reply at once.

Halifax Makes Plea

Meantime, in London, the British foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, called in the Polish ambassador there and asked him to tell Warsaw that Poland should abandon her agitation to regain control of her minority in Czechoslovakia for the present.

Halifax said, according to Polish sources, that Britain and France are striving desperately to preserve European peace and that the injection of Polish and Hungarian demands into their efforts to begin the partitioning of Czechoslovakia, by giving the Czech Sudeten provinces to Germany may upset everything and cause a general war in which all Europe will be "ruined."

The ambassador replied that Poland feels she must act now lest the final arrangement regarding Czechoslovakia shall include Anglo-French military guarantees for what is left of the Czech state and thus bar Poland forever from regaining control of the Teschen-Silesia area.

Wheat Crop Estimated At 5 Billion Bushels

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics yesterday estimated the 1938-39 world wheat supply at 4,940,000,000 bushels. Probable disappearance of wheat during the current marketing year was placed at 3,795,000,000 bushels. This would leave a carry-over of about 1,145,000,000 bushels next July, which compares with the record carry-over of 1,193,000,000 bushels in 1934.

The world supply, excluding Soviet Russia and China, was reported the second largest on record. It consists of 4,345,000,000 bushels estimated produced this year, plus world carry-over stocks July 1 estimated at 595,000,000 bushels. The total supply was reported to be 585,000,000 bushels more than in the year just closed, when supplies were the second smallest since 1927.

Soviet Hints Aid for Czechs Even if France Holds Back

Move Startles Geneva
Rumania Renews Pledge
Harrison Sees Briton

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 23.—Soviet Russia's commissar of foreign affairs in a surprise speech told the League of Nations today Russia might lend a hand voluntarily to Czechoslovakia if the little republic became embroiled in war.

The commissar, Maxim Litvinov, also reiterated emphatically his country would fulfill her Czechoslovak mutual assistance obligations in event France decided to defend the republic against invasion.

Russia is bound by her Czechoslovak mutual assistance pact to defend Czechoslovakia only in case France fights for her protection.

Rumania Renews Pledge

"The Soviet government may come to the aid of Czechoslovakia only in virtue of a voluntary decision on its part or in virtue of a decision by the League," Litvinov said in his appearance, unscheduled before the League Assembly political committee.

"But no one can insist on this help as a duty," he added.

Russia's position was stated to the Czechoslovakian government, Litvinov said, even after the Prague government had accepted the London dismemberment plan, which he called "the ultimatum that included eventual denunciation of the Soviet-Czechoslovak pact."

He declared the Soviet government "does not seek pretexts for evading fulfillment of its obligations."

Russian sources in Geneva said Petrescu Commen, Rumanian delegate to the League, had renewed his country's pledge to allow Russian troops and supplies to move through Rumania to Czechoslovakia, provided France and Britain fought on the side of Moscow.

Litvinov Sees Briton

Such passage has been refused by the Rumanians should Russia fight alone for Czechoslovakia.

Litvinov held a long private conversation with Earl de la Warr, British cabinet member and delegate to the League.

Entirely apart from Litviniv's talk with De la Warr, Russian sources said Moscow had sent the French general staff complete data on land and air forces Russia would send into action immediately if war developed over Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German crisis.

De la Warr, who arrived in Geneva yesterday, has seen a number of other delegates.

DR. JOSEPH BECK, Poland's foreign minister, who yesterday informed Russia that Polish military concentrations on the Czech frontier were of an internal character and had no connection with Soviet affairs. His reply was prompted by a Soviet note reminding Poland of the Russia-Polish nonaggression pact.

Blessing In Disguise?

Because of a shortage of funds Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews says it will be impossible to appoint more than three or four industry committees before Congress returns and replenishes his budget. To an ambitious administrator eager to show quick and imposing results, a restricted appropriation is usually a sore trial. That may be true in this case, but from the viewpoint of an independent observer Mr. Andrews is to be congratulated rather than consoled for his inability to push his program.

He himself has emphasized the importance of deliberate action in undertaking to enforce such a new, experimental kind of regulatory legislation as the wage-hour act. If Congress had voted large sums for immediate use, it would have been almost impossible to resist the temptation to accelerate the work of the industry committees before there had been time to assemble and train a competent corps of assistants and make necessary preliminary studies of administration problems. As matters stand, Mr. Andrews will be able to feel his way, secure from the criticism of the impatient.

If the NRA experiment had been launched on a more modest scale, instead of being expanded with frantic haste in response to emergency appeals, it probably would have accomplished a great deal more than it did before it fell under the ban of the Supreme Court. Indeed, the hostility which gave rise to suits challenging the constitutionality of the law was heightened by the hasty and indiscriminate way in which the work of industrial regimentation was forwarded.

The wage-hour administrator also has to face the prospect of court contests over the constitutionality of the law he is called upon to administer. That he appreciates the importance of limiting his activities to industries conceded to be interstate in character, and of gaining their co-operation, is evident. Having to count pennies may be exasperating but it is less dangerous to the reputation of a new administrative agency than having to spend millions before there has been time to find out how best they can be employed.

Parking Meters

Rejection of the second set of bids submitted to the District Commissioners for the installation of parking meters is certainly not an indication of careful planning. In fairness to the manufacturers of these instruments the Commissioners should have definitely decided what type of meters they wanted before advertising for bids. However, it is better to correct mistakes before a project is started than after it is finished.

The fact that use of parking meters on a limited scale in the downtown area is an experiment makes it all the more important to secure the most satisfactory type of equipment. A proper test could not be made with the semi-automatic meter requiring users to turn a handle before the device will go into operation. Even the automatic meters will leave to the police a substantial enforcement problem. Had the other type been ordered enforcement difficulties would have been much greater.

Officials hope that the meters will bring about a rapid turnover of cars occupying curb space in the downtown area. If that hope is realized, the meters may well be pronounced a success. It should be obvious, however, that the meters alone will not guarantee this result. Officers must be on hand to give motorists tickets when the meter indicates their time is up.

Traffic Director Van Duzer says that the rules will forbid a motorist to retain a parking space by returning periodically and placing a coin in the meter. Obviously, however, the machine will not distinguish between one man and another so long as both drop nickels into the slot. This seems to indicate that a person could park eight hours for 40 cents in some areas where the devices are to be installed, providing he could slip a nickel in the meter every hour without being seen by a policeman.

Parking meters are being used in a number of cities with apparently satisfactory results. Since Washington's parking problem is especially formidable, however, the Commissioners are well advised to insist that the experiment here be made under the most favorable circumstances.

Speaking Of Betrayals

By any objective analysis the United States must shoulder the blame for a large and fundamental part of the responsibility for what is happening in Europe now.

It was this country which, after its President had helped to draft the Treaty of Versailles, promptly refused even the shadow of a commitment for its enforcement. It was the United States which, in 1919, struck the first blow at a structure the demolition of which France and Great Britain seem ready to complete. By what logic, and by what twisted morality, can Americans today blame Chamberlain and Daladier if they carry to conclusion the work begun by our Senate in 1919?

We did not merely prepare the destruction of the Versailles Treaty. President Wilson also collaborated in its drafting in such a way, refusing to countenance the French demands for destroying Germany, that its enforcement became peculiarly our responsibility. Czechoslovakia itself was largely an American creation. And when we abandoned the Czechs in 1919 we did not accuse ourselves of the moral perfidy which we today glibly attribute to others who are now inclined to follow our example.

Unless a guilty conscience is the explanation, there is neither sense nor decency in the present popular denunciation of the French and British. Czechoslovakia, and other new nations, were created by the Treaty of Versailles in part to penalize and subjugate Germany. Many Americans disliked that punitive policy and said so. An effective minority of the Senate refused to ratify. From that moment the settlement was doomed. And it was we, primarily, who doomed it.

When America deserted the treaty it also deserted Czechoslovakia, which for better or worse was irrevocably linked with Versailles. In 1919 this country made its choice and lost all right to resent the dismemberment now taking place. Indeed, if reason counts for anything, we should acclaim this step. For the knife which Hitler wields today we helped to place in his hands. It was the United States which moved first to disrupt Czechoslovakia and other treaty-created states.

The record of our responsibility does not stop with the betrayal of 1919. It has continued down to the present day. Recent American policy has all too obviously contributed to the weakness which Great Britain and France have been forced to admit in the current crisis.

Nothing has been more short-sighted, more shameful, more contributory to the present collapse than America's persistent and successful effort to encourage the present German aggression. By the Johnson act we notified Hitler that France and Great Britain will not be permitted to float loans here in the event of war. By the neutrality acts we told Hitler that when he gets ready to invade Czechoslovakia we will draw no distinctions whatsoever between Germany and her victim. By the narrowly defeated Ludlow resolution we went far to inform the world that there is no cause, short of invasion of our own territory, for which we are willing to make a positive stand.

On top of this record, without parallel for pusillanimity, moral cowardice and stupidity, many Americans today have the unmitigated gall to blame the French and British for caving in. To paraphrase the late President Coolidge: "We urged them to do it, didn't we?" Not once, but over and over again, we have told London and Paris not to count on us when they are confronted by aggression. We have told them, further, that we actually are on the side of the aggressors to the extent that we draw no distinctions whatever in behalf of victimized states. They have taken us at our reiterated word. And now we bleat because they have done so.

History shows few more pitiable and humiliating spectacles. American isolation, pacifism and stupidity in combination have made the United States a country at which Hitler can—and does—contemptuously thumb his nose. Perhaps it is to conceal our utter futility from ourselves that we take refuge in a condemnation of others so cheap, so counter to every chivalrous instinct, as to add deeper humiliation to a record already the more inglorious because of our huge physical strength.

There are even Americans who today criticize the Administration for its failure to "speak out" at the present juncture. It is to the credit of President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull that they seemingly have no such fatuous intention. It was against the will of the Administration that the Johnson act and the neutrality laws were passed. But with those laws on the statute books it is questionable that any Government official has the right to express any opinion which might possibly seem to take issue with Hitler's program, whatever it may be.

In the last analysis Chamberlain and Daladier have been doing exactly what our neutrality legislation stipulates as our policy. They draw no distinctions, and we draw none, between the tyrant and the oppressed. When we realize that the French and British are merely putting our precepts into practice, and very reluctantly at that, the first step toward the rehabilitation of American honor will have been taken. Until then a decent respect for the opinion of mankind would counsel us to reflect upon our own record.

Poland's Cynical Role

The role of Poland in the present European crisis is highly instructive of the lack of principle, the blind opportunism, the tragic short-sightedness which have come to characterize the foreign policy of that nation.

Like Hungary, Poland has come forward to demand the cession of Czechoslovak territory in the event of partition. But while Hungary's attitude is restrained and reasonable, that of Poland is blatant and stupid. Hungary has since 1919 consistently argued against the status quo established by the peace treaties. Her statesmen have repeatedly urged the peaceful retrocession of the portion of Czechoslovakia inhabited by Magyars. And if there is justification for the transfer to Germany of the Sudeten area there is at least equal justification for the transfer to Hungary of Bratislava and the border strip which is almost wholly Magyar in population.

Moreover, the Budapest government is advancing its reasonable claims without bluster or belligerency. In this respect its attitude is in sharp contrast with that of Warsaw, which not only threatens Czechoslovakia with invasion if the relatively tiny area of Polish nationality is not ceded but, through its foreign office organ, is going so far as to demand that the entire Slovak half of Czechoslovakia be joined to Poland.

This is the more grotesque because the tragic plight of Czechoslovakia should nowhere arouse greater sympathy and understanding than in Poland. For 150 years Poland was nothing more than an historical memory, kept alive by a passionate patriotic hope. Warsaw should remember what it is to be partitioned.

Like Czechoslovakia, the new-born Poland was the product of the Versailles Treaty. Had Germany triumphed during the World War the Polish dream would have continued to be a dream and nothing more. But the democracies prevailed and the ensuing collapse of the Austro-Hungarian, German and Russian empires made it possible to unite the dismembered fragments of the almost forgotten Polish nation.

In the long run, Poland would seem to have precious little to gain by playing jackal to the German lion. The same arguments that Hitler uses to encompass the downfall of Czechoslovak independence can be used with even greater force against Poland. Of the European territories which Germany lost at the end of the World War, by far the biggest slice went to the Poles. Upper Silesia, Posen, the Corridor, Danzig—these are issues which it is impossible to believe Germany has permanently shelved.

From a long-run point of view the collapse of collective security and of the French system of alliances constitutes an immeasurable danger for Poland. Her turn to feel the lash of the Third Reich may be next. Yet in the present crisis the Warsaw government has acted as though the aggrandizement of Germany, far from constituting a threat to Poland, provides her with a glorious opportunity to expand her already inflated borders.

The addition of Teschen with its Polish minority, which the Warsaw government now demands from Czechoslovakia at the point of the bayonet, could never compensate Poland for the heightened dangers of German aggression which the destruction of Czechoslovakia would create. To gain temporary ends, Poland may be paving the way for her fourth partition. And, having alienated sympathy by her mistreatment of her minorities over a period of many years, she may well be friendless and helpless if that danger arises.

Once again, as during the eighteenth century, Poland is in danger of being betrayed by her leaders.

On a dull day at this period of the year an editorial writer can (and usually does) fill a column or more under the caption, "When and What Is Indian Summer?"

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty"—and conditions are becoming such that if you take time out to bat your eyes, somebody will snatch some of your liberty right out from under you.

Recently a woman climbed a high Alp and had a baby at its peak. Well that certainly seems to be the height of something or other.

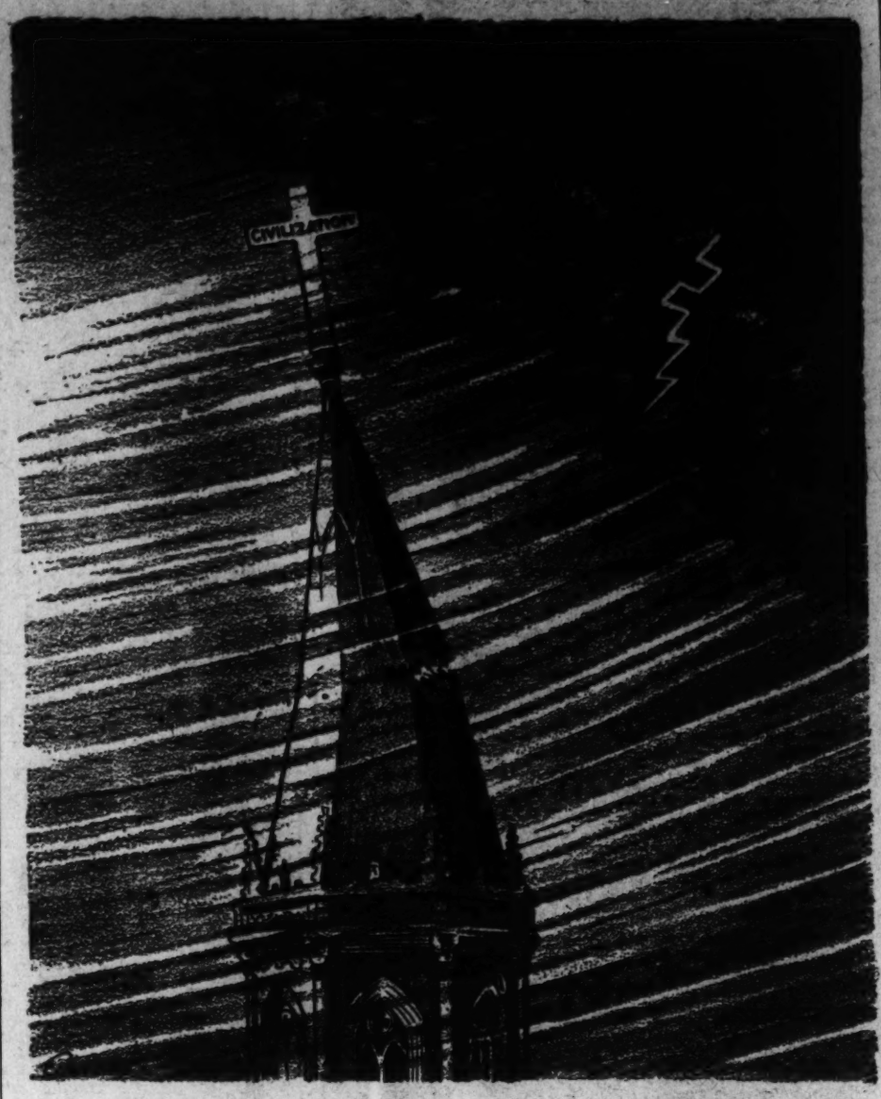

Handicap

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

The motion picture is under a curious disadvantage in one respect as compared with the stage play. The actors for the screen cannot know when laughter or applause is to greet their lines or play. As a result, many a bon mot is born to waste its breath on the uproarious air. Several of our recent pictures have demonstrated this, none better than "You Can't Take It With You." Even enthusiasts who have seen it twice or thrice agree that many of the lines are lost in the audience's noisy reaction to the lines preceding.

The stimulus of applause and laughter is keen enough to make actors who have once known it always hanker for it when the transition has been made from stage to screen. It is the primary reason for the periodical return of so many stars from Hollywood to Broadway. We are glad to note that the eastward parade gives signs of continuing this winter.

"The Fact Is We Quit"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish the letter of H. de Jersey in The Post of September 22 could have been printed in capitals. Short and sound, it loosens blinders that have been part of our political harness since the last war. We are not disposed to take any blame for our failure then to "Make the world safe for democracy." But the fact is we quit.

Why we quit may be a more interesting question some day than the famous one, "Who won the war?" (Germany, is my answer.) Perhaps it was dread of the liberal measures Wilson had in view when the war interrupted which led to his receiving an adverse vote in the "solemn referendum." It may be suggested that the cloud of lascivious stories about Wilson's private life which circulated for years previous had special influence, because women were voting for the first time. They had not yet gotten wise to this technique of political strategy.

But such points are now academic. We must recall that as Lincoln said, "the Nation cannot endure half free and half slave," so Mussolini has said, "It is we or they," and we must realize that both were right.

No nation can endure unless its policy, including an intelligently conceived foreign policy, is firmly directed toward the future. If we want a nation to be here when we are gone we must scorn the poltroon's "it won't come in my time anyway," and the fool's "no matter who else is licked, we won't be." If we don't care, the Nation simply won't be here, and some of us with surprise may live to miss it.

"Have To Do Something"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All I know is what I read in the newspapers. What I don't know is what is the matter with Neville Chamberlain. What is the matter with France? And what is the matter with America? I don't want war. Neither does anybody else, probably including Hitler. He gets what he wants without war.

Don't the European nations and America know that Hitler has to be stopped some time? The only reason that I can see for the permitted partitioning of the Czechs' land is the distant hope that either Hitler will be overthrown by internal revolution or fail to win in a future war with Russia. These are dismal excuses for bowing to Hitler.

If America made a bluff, or even carried further than the bluffing stage, gave a promise and then action of full support behind England, France and Russia, I believe that other nations would throw their lot in and either scare Hitler to death or beat him in a short time.

But we and they have to do something. Hitler will go on, getting stronger and stronger, making better and better preparations, and thus in the end become a formidable opponent to whip. Democracy and justice demand that he be stopped sometime. It is common sense to do it now. WM. J. RESSEGGER.

Perfume In A Hurricane

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Barnum knew more than that there was a sucker born every minute; he knew also that all people dote on superlatives—the tallest man, the fattest lady or the most gigantic elephant in the whole wide world will always serve to get the open-mouthed stare of humanity.

Well, folks, today we have for exhibition the biggest thing yet—the superlative of superlatives—yes, sir; right this way, ladies and gentlemen!

Stupendous and colossal! old Barnum might have said, but even the vocabulary of a master showman would be pitifully inadequate to express the degradation of character or the unholy depths of shame that the dastardly desertion of Czechoslovakia is costing the British and French people for the luxury of a peace as fleeting as milady's perfume in a howling hurricane. A price that bankrupts the honor and integrity of the democracies and brings the moral plane of the entire civilized world to its lowest level since the dawn of history. ROGER GISH McDARE.

A Vexing Situation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I always read with interest the letters on your editorial page and now I should like to express my view of the German-Czechoslovakian situation.

The Germans are a great people and they will become even greater if the English and French diplomats continue to co-operate with them.

It is good to know that at last a vexing situation has been righted.

Someone said: "If the Sudetens don't like it in Czechoslovakia let them get out." Now we know they do like it in their own proper land and they will even like it better under Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

WANTMORE TRUTH.
Washington, Sept. 22.

Self-Determination

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hold no brief for Hitler or any of his plans. On the contrary, I am deeply distressed by his outrageous treatment of the Jews. At the same time, I think that the idea of annexing the Sudeten area to Germany is thoroughly meritorious, and should be approved by all. For that's where this area belongs, under Woodrow Wilson's sound principle of self-determination.

And the same principle should be applied to the areas in Czechoslovakia, where Poles and Hungarians are in the majority. Czechoslovakia is entitled to the territory where the Czechs (and Slovaks, if they agree) predominate, and to nothing more. She would then be larger than Denmark or Holland. Is there any good reason (emotion omitted) why she shouldn't be satisfied with that?

The present boundaries of Czechoslovakia were drawn primarily for military purposes, with little thought of justice or merit. The action was a part of the common European procedure for making war perennial. The Czechs are old-time enemies of the Sudeten Germans. The latter pleaded with the war lords to go with Austria or Germany. Their pleas were denied on military grounds, and a situation was produced not unlike that which obtained in our South during reconstruction days.

It is obviously childish to assert that Germany's just demand for Sudetenland should not be granted, because, if granted, she would make unjust demands. The militarists of the world (not Hitler alone) are continually working out plans, based largely on unsound assumptions, which are intended to make one land strong and healthy, and the lands of potential enemies weak and emaciated. History shows that most of this work is a failure.

The channels of communication in the United States are filled with very undependable propaganda. Our Jewish friends, properly bitter at Hitler (assisted by various other interests), are filling the air with clouds of dust. Poor Dorothy Thompson, mad at Hitler because he kicked her out of Germany (probably unjustly), has become hysterical. A LITTLE SANITY.
Washington, Sept. 22.

"A Conquered People"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No printed matter which has come to my attention relating to the German dismemberment of Czechoslovakia has touched the main point in the issue, so far as the United States is concerned.

That point is, believe it or not, that on Wednesday, September 21, the United States lost a war with Germany without striking a defensive blow.

On that date the people of the United States became a conquered people.

Shameful as is the German rape of Czechoslovakia, it is not as shameful as the moral and physical cowardice evinced by the Government of the United States and the majority of Americans.

Any American who is not inwardly seething with anger and horror at the German action is not worthy of the name.

The thing which has distinguished the American Nation from other nations was not alone our Constitution and our democracy, but the moral principle of justice for all which was written not only into the Constitution and the minds and hearts of its founders, but in the minds and hearts of those who came afterward.

America has hitherto been great, not only because of her wealth but because of her inherent morality.

Let quibbling analysts and critics say what they will, the majority of the men who fought in the war against Germany 20 years ago believed they were fighting for the principles of justice and freedom and against tyranny. We were then shocked beyond measure before we entered the war, at the reported advance, day by day of the German military horde. We felt that might was winning a fight against justice and honor. That was what we believed then, though we may have been wrong from a political standpoint. So far as our purpose was concerned, we were, in our own hearts, striking a blow for freedom, just as much as our forbears did in the War of the Revolution.

We have lived to see our work undone. We have lived to see the German invader conquer not alone Czechoslovakia, but every one of the allies with whom we fought in 1917 and 1918.

And we have entered no protest.

We have not struck a single blow.

We have bowed our heads to the iron heel.

We have saved our bodies but lost our souls.

The great articulate materialists and earthworms say: "We loaned them money and they did not pay us. Europe's problems are no affair of ours. We got nothing from the last war and we would get nothing out of helping them now."

These arguments are the lies of mountebanks and charlatans.

We loaned our allies no money. We loaned them goods, war supplies and merchandise at exorbitant profits and they offered to pay in kind and we refused.

The answer to the second part of the argument is likewise false. We got a thousand times more out of the World War than our allies because we fought for no material gain.

We got the beat of proud hearts who believed they were fulfilling a high mission.

We kept a priceless jewel which otherwise we would have lost forever—we kept our self-respect.

As the result of our taking action to help the civilized nations in their hour of necessity, we kept faith with ourselves and something higher.

If Americans do not believe that these things are more priceless than anything money could buy, then indeed we are lost. Then indeed the curtain has been run down on that America which has been so great.

The gilded opportunists and materialists will jibe at these thoughts. But let them think what they may—something beautiful and worthy has gone out of the world; out of the lives of the American people and something terrible has come in. The world will not be the same place for a majority of the world's people from now on. The American people will find they are not quite as happy and carefree in the future as they have been in the past. They will be conscious of the presence of an ominous shadow, 3,000 miles away, to be sure, but close, ever so close, anyway.

We could have done much.

We have done nothing.

We have dishonored ourselves and our history.

We are a conquered people.

County Fair

NORTH of town there was a crowd standing in the dark and the deep dust of the road, moving toward the narrow gate in the high fence that cut off the fair grounds. On the far side of the road a small but dense patch of sugar cane, unexpected in Virginia, caught the moving lights of automobiles, while on the other side of the fence a brilliant glare rose from hundreds of unshaded lights. Listening to the laughter about us and to the voices of young men with their girls on their arms, of farmers, of horse traders and cattle dealers, of gentle-ladies who had fanned themselves on Main street porches all summer, of CCC boys, of Negroes—our turns came at last and we got through the gate.

Ahead of us the "midway" stretched. Lined with false fronts and canvas sideshows, chipped and weatherbeaten and stained by time, it was unbelievably bright and cheap and raucous. And yet, unbelievably, there was a kind of fascination about the midway, tawdry to be sure, that showed in the faces of people who were either curious or charmed. Slowly, they moved from one "attraction" to another, or stood spellbound before the platforms that offered "free performances," unable to leave the eloquence of the sideshow barkers. Everything hummed with the freedom of Saturday night.

To our right was a long tent with a platform in front and overhead a dozen large and faded canvases, once painted in colors. On the canvases, a man in a Cossack blouse was calmly eating the fire off the end of three long tapers; a lady innocuously named Frances stood serenely on the sharp edge of a sword; a head wrapped in turban from which mathematical marks extended like rays, looked with averted eyes at a painted crystal ball; and a mountain of flesh, billed the "fattest woman in the world," attempted to balance her bulk on the tips of her toes. Of one accord we moved toward the tent just as the barker, waving a microphone before his face, became confidential in a rasping and thunderous voice.

"Now I tell you what," he roared, "we been charging 15 cents all week for this here worl' famous show. But I tell you what. You look like people I want for friends of mine, so I'm going to give you a free show—right here. That is I'm going to show you just a few of the worl' famous attractions we got here, then I'm going to let you see all our attractions for ONE DIME! Think of it—one dime. Now come in close, everybody, and watch!"

We went in close and watched while he majestically picked a double handful of dirty manila hemp off the floor and began eating it, apparently with relish. With a little baton he pushed the hemp into a cavernous mouth and chewed. The hemp disappeared. Then, leaning back on his heels he pressed his stomach and a long blue plume of smoke came from his mouth. He did it three times. Now you've got to admire that.

He worked the fervor of his crowd to a pitch, and between exhortations his free show went on. He called a "little lady," with a tired, painted face, from the rear of the stage to the front. She wore soiled, green silk bloomers. "Now you've seen her!" he cried. "She walks and she talks. And you see this big black box here on the stage! I'm going to ask the little lady to lay down in the box. And—it seems a shame to do it, but when you come into our show you'll see I done it all right—I'm going to cut off her head!"

We didn't see because there was the rest of the fair. There were sideshows where "girls from Paris," wiggling tiredly in cheap velvet at the command of barkers, were supposed to dance on the pavements of that city; shows where you could see the "mysteries of life" (if you wanted to)—preserved in alcohol; shows where colored "cotton pickers," under the frenzied leadership of "Silas Green from New Orleans," whipped rhythm out of untuned banjos. There was the hippodrome where a girl and a young man, in riding breeches and leather helmets, rode motorcycles around the rim of a wooden bowl; there was a zoo under a tent where monkeys ate with knives and forks.

Under another tent an admiring audience, for the most part in khaki, watched while one of their brothers in the CCC sat patiently having his arm tattooed. Behind us a voice, obviously belonging to one of the Main street porch sitters, said, "Look, Mildred! I'll vow if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes I wouldn't have believed it. And they say it won't come off! Well, it takes all kinds to make a world!"

Among the "rides" were the caterpillar, the whip and some airplanes on cables guaranteed to make you sick. Near the livestock sheds, where blue ribbon animals slept, people ate hot dogs and really drank a pink liquid called lemonade. There was a brisk game of bingo going on outside the exhibit hall that contained the best canning and sewing in the county. There was everything you could hope for at a county fair, which, as our week-end hostess said, is one form of American life that hasn't changed with time.

In The Land Of Purges

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of our American system of purges and purgees, I read in Eugene Lyons' "Assignment in Utopia"—where the author describes a forgathering of the Soviet Parliament in the Kremlin—that "the 'legislative' powers of the Tzik (the central executive committee of the nation), except on paper, were limited to raising hands for unanimous approval of whatever was submitted by the government."

The Democracies' Shame

TO BE PERFECTLY truthfull, Britain, France and this country are suffering more from humiliation and shame in the case of Czechoslovakia than from sorrow at the passing of an experimental republic. All three are deeply humiliated because an enemy who had his nose rubbed in the dust in 1918 and in the years ensuing has come off the floor with a crazy look in his eye and stood down those who licked him.

The situation is a reminder of a prize-fight story, probably one of Charlie Van Loan's, in which a half-starved club fighter with a sick wife on his mind, was knocked flat and left for dead on the canvas, but suddenly bounced up, clear out of his mind from worry, privation and punishment, and chased his opponent over the ropes.

THE DEMOCRACIES are ashamed because the one whom they lately delighted to kick around and then to pity has looked them in the eye and made them flinch. This country cannot escape a share of the same feeling because the U. S. A. established an export trade in democracies and then pretended to be just waiting for a street car when Hitler asked point blank whether anyone wanted to make anything out of it as he wiped out the last democracy east of the Rhine.

Czechoslovakia was an awkward experiment at best, containing in a small country, intended as a model, many of the very elements which made Austria-Hungary offensive to the pestiferous idealists that the Americans were in the war days. By sheer force of idealism and wishing, the conquerors thought to extinguish or compromise the beloved hatreds of groups of people who had taken turns oppressing and being oppressed by one another for hundreds of years.

• • • •

IT JUST DIDN'T WORK and the odds are that if Hitler and Germany hadn't broken up Czechoslovakia at this time, some other combination of events would have broken it up in the future.

From the idealistic standpoint, France behaved quite badly after the war in her impoliteness to the Germans in the occupied country, but the truth is that the Germans would have been just as sore and eager to avenge a licking, however kindly they might have been treated.

North Beach Votes Today on Sewage System Project

North Beach, Md., Sept. 23.—Residents of North Beach, Md., will vote tomorrow on the question of securing from the Public Works Administration approximately $120,000 for the construction of a sewerage system and disposal plant. If the money is secured, $54,000 will be a direct grant with $66,000 to be raised by the city.

The Maryland State Department of Health has informed the town's committee on sanitation that it is "impossible to maintain satisfactory sanitary conditions unless a public sewerage system is installed to remove the sanitary sewage from the individual properties and a sewage treatment plant constructed to dispose of the sewage adequately."

Chairman of the sanitation committee is Dr. George W. Calver, attending physician of the United States Congress. Secretary is Dr. Clyde L. West, who was one of the men inoculated by Dr. Walter Reed in experiments which led to extermination of yellow fever from the Panama Canal Zone.

D.C. Court Indorses C. & O. Canal Sale

The last legal barrier to Government purchase of the old Chesapeake & Ohio canal for a park project was removed yesterday when Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of District Court, signed an order authorizing the sale, for $2,000,000. The order also authorized sale of certain canal properties to the C. & O. Railroad for $100,000 and provided that creditors of the canal companies should have the same rights against the money paid that they had to the property before it was sold.

Authorized to convey the properties were the ancillary receivers of the canal company, Edgar W. Young, R. S. B. Hartz and G. L. Nicolson.

State Body Plans 7 New Armories

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Officials of the adjutant general's office said today plans were being considered for new armories at Roanoke, Winchester, Berryville, Martinsville, Harrisonburg, Covington and Clifton Forge.

Efforts were being made, it was said, to interest city officials and others in making applications for PWA grants and loans before the deadline for such applications on September 30. The new armories are needed to meet the various requirements of the War Department.

German Paganism

By Ewart E. Turner

The Nazis Split On Religion

[This is the fourth and last of a series of articles by the Rev. Dr. Ewart E. Turner, former pastor of the American church in Berlin, on the present religious situation in greater Germany. In previous articles Dr. Turner discussed the status of confessional Protestants, of the Austrian Catholics since the Anschluss and the present position of the German Jews.—Editor's note.]

TRAVELING in Germany this summer I found a problem vital for Europe's future. It is the inner battle between two widely divergent forces, both of which are seeking to determine the spiritual and social philosophy upon which the new Germany is to be built.

This battle is wider than such formulae as "State versus Church," or "National-Socialism versus Christianity." It is splitting the Nazi party into two factions, it has made a wide rift in the army, the university life of Germany is lining up on one side or the other. In the Protestant Church the division is clear: the German Christians frankly want to Nazify all church doctrine, while the Confessional Church (more than two-thirds of all pastors and communicants) affirms historic Christian faith.

Hitler has repeatedly declared that Nazism is more than a political movement, it is chiefly a "weltanschauliche Bewegung," a faith-philosophical movement. Christians, and others representing traditional European culture, ask what this faith is. Hitler seemed to answer them clearly by appointing Alfred Rosenberg as Reich leader for the education of the party. Rosenberg is the chief racialist writer and anti-Christian exponent of the Nazi movement.

Chancellor Hitler continues to elevate and honor Rosenberg. At last year's Nuremberg Party Congress Hitler conferred Germany's highest literary and scientific award on Rosenberg. Shortly afterward, the Martin Luther University of Halle chose Rosenberg as its protector. His books are now texts at the camps and training schools of the party.

UNTIL THIS YEAR Christian theologians have had opportunity to reply to the anti-Christian writings of Rosenberg. But these theologians so completely refuted Rosenberg and so exposed his historical and philosophical errors that a strict prohibition of books against him has been introduced.

Especially ironical is the preface to Rosenberg's latest attack on Christianity, "Protestant Pilgrimage to Rome." Rosenberg describes the public discussion between himself and the Protestant theologians as "having totally the character of a knightly encounter." He also adds that he will maintain respect for "even my bitterest evangelical opponents."

What happened, however, when the Protestants replied to this historically inaccurate defamation of their faith? Dr. Walther Kunneth, the great Germany authority on Rosenberg, prepared a restrained and scholarly reply to the "Protestant Pilgrimage to Rome." The Secret Police seized this in manuscript and forbade its publication. The great Protestant publishing house, the Wichern-Verlag, printed a shorter refutation by Kunneth, entitled, "Evangelical Truth." This was confiscated and the publishing house was padlocked for a period.

At a gathering of Protestant leaders in Kassel an official statement regarding Rosenberg's attack was drawn up. The Secret Police raided the publishing house Kohler, in Elberfeld, where this official statement was printed. All copies were confiscated and the publishing house closed. Housesearchings, even in remote parsonages in the provinces, were instigated by the police in the attempt to prevent the official Protestant statement from being circulated.

BUT SUCH FACTS as these are not the total picture which one finds in the Third Reich. To be sure Niemoeller is in concentration camp, Catholic and Protestant private schools have been closed, the religious press is severely censored, religious youth organizations are dissolved, the number of Protestant theological students has dropped from 6,500 in 1931 to 1,500 in 1938. Such facts are abundant and terrifying.

There is a second picture, however. My travels in Germany this summer convince me that only a small percentage of those supporting Hitler likewise support "the system." That is, they admire Hitler's personal leadership, they believe progress has been made in foreign affairs, work creation, internal unity and in other fields, but they are also Germans, dwellers in the land of the poets and thinkers. A large group of Nazis are increasingly regretting the anti-Semitic excesses, the decline of the university life, the racial indoctrination of their youth, and especially the anti-Christian campaign of the radical Nazi wing.

One Nazi youth leader expressed it this way to me: "Wait until we younger National Socialists get in power. We are not going to try to revolutionize everything that has been German in the past." Then he described "the two Third Reichs" which already are forming rapidly in the New Germany. One Third Reich, he said, is the Rosenberg-Goebbels-Goering realm of radical and anti-Christian racialism; science, art and religion must conform to the Nazi philosophy or be liquidated.

• • • •

THE SECOND Third Reich can name no prominent Nazi among its leaders but embodies the army tradition, the old Prussian spirit, the university tradition and the Protestant consciousness. This second Third Reich holds the allegiance of two-thirds of the present supporters of Hitler, my Nazi youth leader stated. These moderate Nazis voted Hitler into power expecting that Christianity would be preserved and German culture saved from bolshevization.

Everywhere in Germany I found these two forces struggling for dominance within national socialism. I met Nazi school teachers who conduct Christian devotional services and report reverence on the part of all students. Pastors told me of applications made by whole sections of the Hitler girls' organizations to attend church in a body; some were granted and the girls attended in uniform. Groups of Nazi Party members from Westphalia, Niemoeller's home province, have appeared at the Berlin governmental ministries pleading for his release.

At the same time, the oldest and finest Protestant church in Munich, St. Matthew's, has been torn down. The buildings and property of the Student Christian Association in Berlin were confiscated and the organization forbidden in August. Stadia of consecration (Weihstatten) and ancestral halls (Ahnenhallen) are springing up all over Germany; the mayor of Gustrow, in dedicating the new Ahnenhalle of Mecklenburg, called it "a temple of German blood."

The age-old struggle between Christianity and paganism goes on, even within national socialism itself.

U. S. Expenditures Exceed Its Income

The Treasury disclosed yesterday it spent more than $2,000,000,000 in less than three months.

Under the emergency spending program, Federal activities cost $2,026,487,649 between July 1 and September 21. Expenditures exceeded income by $600,256,206 in spite of September 15 quarterly income tax collections.

The pace of Federal spending was stepped up particularly during the period by increased WPA costs to support a record pay roll of more than 3,100,000 persons. WPA, spending $499,392,785, was responsible for a fourth of all Federal costs.

Income tax collections in the first 21 days of September totaled $472,398,428, or about $12,000,000 more than in the same period last year. The increase was not unexpected, however, because tax payers are still on their 1937 income.

The New Dealers

By Mark Sullivan

A Single Purge Victory

THE NEW DEALERS take satisfaction in having won one point of the purge. They argue thus: Mr. O'Connor, of New York was head of the powerful House Committee on Rules, and by that position had power to impede some New Deal legislation. With Mr. O'Connor defeated in the Democratic primary, headship of the Committee on Rules will presumably go, by operation of the seniority rule, to the next in rank, who happens to be friendly to the New Deal.

Thus the New Dealers console themselves. But there isn't much in it. Whatever they gain by possession of this tactical position on the Rules Committee, they more than lose by the emotional effect which the purge has had on the whole body of Democrats in Congress. Every Democrat in Congress says to himself, "As John O'Connor is today, so I might ave been."

The effect of their thinking thus is not to make them terrified and supine—it is to make them resentful and defiant. From the time the purge was begun, they felt it was an outrageous thing for the President to do. They felt that if it was successful against all or most of the men against whom it was directed, Mr. Roosevelt and the other purgers would have gained courage and tried to extend it.

• • • •

HAD THE PURGE been really successful, the Democrats in Congress would have foreseen a condition in which they could hold their offices only at the will of Mr. Roosevelt and his little coterie of White House intimates.

As it turned out, the Democrats in the Congress that meets next January will feel not only the dislike that many of them had for the New Deal as such. They will feel also the aggregate of individual resentments arising from the fear they have been obliged to pass through, the fear of each that he, too, might have been subjected to attempt at purge.

They will feel this resentment and they will feel free to express it by their attitude on legislation. Their next primaries will be a year and a half ahead of them. If the Democrats in the House last April and May had a period of subservience to Mr. Roosevelt, it was mainly because at that time the primaries were only a few weeks ahead of them. Now they will be secure until the primaries of 1940.

NO, IN THE OUTCOME of the purge as a whole, there isn't much salvage for Mr. Roosevelt and the purgers. It's just about a total loss.

Looking upon the purge as directed against the three Democratic Senators into whose States President Roosevelt went to attack them by name, and also the one Representative who did most to resist the Government reorganization bill, Mr. O'Connor, of New York—looking upon the purge that way, the score is 3 to 1. Looking upon the purge as directed against the nine Democratic Senators who opposed President Roosevelt's Court measure, and the one Representative, the score is 9 to 1. In terms of baseball, we might say that after the game had been disastrously lost, Mr. Roosevelt managed to score one run in the last inning.

From the standpoint of public psychology, Mr. Roosevelt might be better off if the score were 10 to 0, rather than 9 to 1 or 3 to 1. Had it been a "shut-out," public psychology might have felt that Mr. Roosevelt had a high cause too much in advance of the times to be successful now. With the score as it is, public psychology is likely to feel that Mr. Roosevelt fought an ordinary political battle and was defeated.

THERE IS A consideration still more important. Had Mr. Roosevelt lost all, he would have been more justified in starting a new party. He could have taken the position that the Democratic Party is hopeless, that a new party is imperative. As it turned out, the appearance now is that Mr. Roosevelt fought for control of the Democratic Party, that the fight was fair and that the odds were not overwhelmingly against him. If he tries now to start a new party, he does it as a disgruntled contestant, a poor loser, not as the evangel of a high cause.

One clear effect of the purge battle is to make plain to all that there is a difference between the New Deal and Democratic Party. For more than five years, the terms have been used interchangeably. Now everybody knows that "New Dealers" are one thing while "Democrats" are another, and that there has been a battle between the two ending in victory for the Democrats. This differentiation deprives Mr. Roosevelt of an advantage he has had in the past.

The rose on the vine is a glory,
But this one is no less sweet
Telling its young-old story
Pressed to an album sheet,
Its heady aroma depleted,
Its leaves grown yellowed and sere,
For herein is romance completed,
And poignancy breaths out of here.

Here on these molded pages
It speaks of a glorious strife
With moments that lived into ages
And ages compressed to a life,
The tale of a thousand endings
That, before the telling is done,
By a thousand different blendings,
Have mellowed and fused into one.

Though the hand that placed it be hoary
Or dead in its winding sheet,
Though the rose on the vine is a glory,
Yet this, with its sad, glad story,
Ah, this one is no less sweet.

Wet towels are draped across the lawn,
Limp souvenirs of swimmers gone.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

"IT IS thought that if Mrs. Roosevelt would transfer her energy and understanding toward ending unjust discrimination against women in the Federal service, where there is such a vast field for improvement, she would find it both interesting and worthwhile."

So writes a correspondent to this column with an appended contention that women are discriminated against in the old-line and solidly regarded ICC. The theme is set off with a question:

"Is it necessary for a Federal employe in a clerical status, who subsequently graduates in law and passes the bar examination, to take a civil service or other examination, before promotion to a professional grade as an attorney or examiner?"

• • • •

"No," the Civil Service Commission tells us—"that is, not necessarily." Many departments have their own regulations, however, and these regulations stick. Promotions, in such instances as mentioned above, seem left pretty much to the determination of the departments—and it is true, from our own knowledge, that women don't become Government attorneys too easily.

• • • •

WE RECALL a case of a girl in Agriculture who was brought in for legal work and somebody over there thought it so unusual that we were called posthaste to interview her. And she was as scared of talking as the young lawyer might be on his first formal appearance in court.

• • • •

You will recall, also, the rumpus that ensued several months ago when Agriculture said, in so many words, that it wanted only such attorneys as were graduated from recognized schools, the recognition being largely with the American Bar Association.

• • • •

THAT THIS was disquieting to all the night schools' pupils is to say the least. They considered that they could pass the bar exams, and it was an unhappy circumstance that their diplomas didn't come from Yale, Harvard or the like so that they might work in the big department.

• • • •

So it is a real situation. In the ICC instance, it appears that the alleged discrimination is entirely against women. Quoting our correspondent: ". . . the ICC has a rather large staff of attorneys and examiners who were promoted from clerical grades to professional grades, without further examination. The employes in question had no legal experience and in the majority of cases acquired no legal experience when they performed within the ICC prior to appointment to the professional grades * * * In some instances, those promoted had not passed the bar examination."

• • • •

CONTINUING: "The case cited is a woman employe, who has several college degrees, is a former school teacher in a large city, secretary once to a railroad executive, a member of the bar and who has passed the civil service legal examination, but who has not been able to obtain transfer to a legal position within the ICC, while those without such qualifications and civil service status have been rapidly promoted to such positions. It is said that the chief of the legal staff does not want women in legal positions . . ."

• • • •

". . . please explain just how it is proposed to work out an honest 'career service'—or does the Civil Service Commission believe in the divine right of kings and that only the favored shall be able to reach the door of 'career service?'"

• • • •

THE LATTER question is not for us to answer; we can only say from knowledge that the way of the lady lawyer in the Federal service is a tough row to hoe. If the legal chiefs don't want women attorneys, they can pretty well keep them out. It's in the game, and some past masters play it.

• • • •

The theme is interesting—certainly to the thousands of women who contemplate the legal profession—and it would be in point for a legal chief or two to say publicly what are the objections to women lawyers. "The law schools certainly should know the fault, if any, with this bloc of their product.

Man In A Hurry

By Barnet Nover

The Godesberg Climax

DAYS THAT WERE centuries have passed since Neville Chamberlain's fateful interview with Adolf Hitler at Berchtesgaden. But the mystery of what took place and what was said on that world-shaking occasion has only partially been dispelled and then only through the revealing character of subsequent events. So far, neither the British Parliament nor the British public has been taken into Mr. Chamberlain's confidence.

Nor has the world been told the precise terms of the plan of capitulation to Hitler which the British and French governments sought to ram down the throat of Czechoslovakia. Nor was there any official reason offered either in Paris or London why the second meeting of Chamberlain and Hitler coincided with a new period of intense international strain, in some respects even more ominous than the last.

Twenty years after Woodrow Wilson proclaimed as one of his 14 points the doctrine of "open covenants, openly arrived at," the diplomats and statesmen are operating behind an impenetrable smoke screen.

• • • •

THIS CONSPIRACY of silence obviously suits the purpose of the totalitarian dictators. Does it also suit the purpose of the democratic states?

The answer to this question is not easy. Wilson himself found his theory of open diplomacy subject to grave reservations; international negotiations of great moment cannot be conducted in public meeting. And yet it is doubtful if any useful national or international advantage has been gained by the action of Great Britain and France in clamping down the lid. The vacuum created by the tight-lipped Mr. Chamberlain and the sworn-to-silence M. Daladier has been filled in the way such a vacuum is always filled—by rumor and conjecture and surmise. If the terms of the Anglo-French surrender to Hitler remain a secret, even the least informed in Great Britain and France and every other part of the world know that it was a surrender, and because they know it a clamor has arisen that threatens to sweep Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier out of office.

Both in Great Britain and France powerful sections of public opinion are aghast at what has happened. The people of both nations want peace and want it desperately. But the enormity of the capitulation made in the name of peace is beginning to stagger them.

• • • •

UNTIL NOW, however, silence if of questionable advantage to Great Britain and France, has been of decided advantage to Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier. In the words of Lady Macbeth they could say: "If 'twere done when 'tis done, 'twere well it were done quickly." For having crossed the Rubicon it was essential that this decision be not reversed by an outraged public opinion.

No wonder, then, that Chamberlain deems it necessary to extract from Hitler concessions which will ease the hurt which all Britons and all Frenchmen jealous of their nation's honor so deeply feel. And all the indications from Prague point to the fact that surrender, even on the most reasonable terms, which Great Britain and France can extract from the Fuehrer, is certain to meet with popular resistance; surrender on an unconditional basis may lead the Czechs to fight no matter how hopeless the odds. And should war break out, there is still no certainty that France and Great Britain can stay out. On the contrary, the very fact that there is now in both countries a rising tide of humiliation and indignation regarding what has been done may make the participation of those nations more certain. The French and British know this. Does Hitler? Possibly. But their threats can be discounted and a war against Czechoslovakia alone would, many Nazis feel, add the glory of military victory to the laurels of territorial annexation.

THE TROUBLE is that the Fuehrer is a man in a hurry. The very fact that the tempest of opinion which blew one way in the democracies in the days immediately following the Nuremberg party congress is beginning to blow the other way now, suggests that there is reason for his haste. In effect Great Britain and France gave him carte blanche to do his will on Czechoslovakia; he sees no reason why he should restrain his hand and do piecemeal what in his opinion is safest and easiest done in one fell swoop. If German press comment offers any indication of what is in his mind, and the German press is allowed to say only what the regime allows it to say, he wants nothing left of Czechoslovakia—not even a name.

THE FIRMER attitude now being displayed by Great Britain and France may lead him to accept a little less than he feels he can get at this time; to postpone the armed occupation of the territory which the democracies have told him he can have and temporarily refrain from taking territory he expects to get anyway. The advantages are clearly on his side.

That was not always true. In fact it was never true until this week. Until then Great Britain and France and those nations, such as Czechoslovakia and Soviet Russia and others prepared to follow their lead, had the upper hand so far as the ultimates of power are concerned. And twice, at least, a firm stand by them did ward off threatened danger. That was true during the May crisis. It was true again on the eve of the Nuremberg congress. But as the days wore on, the democracies faltered. No longer able to discount the possibilities of war, they decided that the best course was capitulation.

Once that fateful decision was reached, Hitler was in a position to discount any future demands by them, any stiffening of their attitude. The British and French are discovering the elementary principle that it is easier to go downhill than up.

Rosh Hashanah Begins Tomorrow
Special Food in 2-Day Rites
Congregations to Worship Here

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, 5699, will be ushered in tomorrow at sundown in local synagogues and temples, with the traditional blasts of the Shofar (ram's horn) not only reminding Judaism of the need for repentance and reflection, but inspiring hope for the future.

Among the principal orthodox services, which continue for two days, is that at the Adas Israel Synogogue, Sixth and I streets northwest, where on Monday at 10:30 a. m., Rabbi Solomon Metz will preach on "The Day of Judgment." He will speak the following day on "Out of the Depths." Evening services are set for 6:30 p. m. Sunday and Monday.

Speaking tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Washington Hebrew Temple (Reformed), where services will conclude Monday afternoon, Rabbi Abram Simon, emphasizing his race's need for optimism in its dark days, will discuss the topic: "Hope Springs Eternal in the Jewish Breast." Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld speaks Monday at 10:30 a. m. Boards of the congregation will tender a reception to other members of the congregation from 4 to 6 o'clock on the same day.

Services Tripartite

At the Southeast Hebrew Congregation, 417 Ninth street southeast, where Rabbi J. T. Loeb will be in charge, the Rosh Hashanah rites, following custom, will be divided into three parts—the Malchroth, Zichronoth and Shofroth, with 30 trumpet blasts being blown at the conclusion of each section and ten final blasts.

Cantor Pinchos Phillips, of New York, accompanied by a male choir, will offer special music at all services of the Ohev Sholom Congregation, Fifth and I streets northwest. Services will be held tomorrow from 6 to 7 p. m.; Monday and Tuesday from 7 a. m. until 2 p. m., with Rabbi Zemach Green delivering addresses at 10:30 a. m. each day.

Worshipers at the recently merged Beth Sholom-Talmud Torah Synogogue, Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest, will hear Cantor Samuel Vigola, formerly of New York City, with a 16-voice choir. Rabbi H. M. Levinson has selected "The Kingdom of God" as his sermon for Monday at 10 a. m., and "Day of Remembrance" as the Tuesday morning subject.

"The Day of the Shofar"

Rabbi Harry Silverstone, of the Tifereth Israel Synogogue, Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest, will preach on "The Day of the Shofar" at the services Monday morning and on "Signs of the New Year" Tuesday morning. Cantor Intrater, of Atlantic City, will conduct the music.

Services also are scheduled for the Talmud Torah Congregation, 467 E street southwest, with Rabbi Joshua Klavin presiding; in the B'Nai Israel, 4901 Fourteenth street northwest; Ezras, 800 I street northwest; Kesher Israel, 2801 N street northwest; Beth El, 702 Jefferson street northwest, and the Volner Anchi Svart, 607 Four-and-a-half street.

Finest Foods Prepared

The average Jewish family usually ushers in the New Year by preparing the finest delicacies and sweetmeats, including honey, symbolic of a sweet and pleasant New Year. The home is also provided with the customary wine for Kiddush (sanctification of the Holy Day and two white loaves of bread of finely wrought "chaloths" for blessing at the festive board. The loaves, twist-shaped and rising upward, typify the prayers of Israel which shall rise up toward heaven and be acceptable to God.

Potomac Church Sponsors Unique Children's Clinic

Fletcher, with her 14-month-old daughter, Alice Mae; Mrs. C. A. Peterson, the nurse, and 3-month-old Harold Hessenauer. Dr. Grace A. Purse is supervisor

Unique among church-sponsored projects in the Nation's Capital, the child-welfare clinic of the Potomac Heights Community Church is performing an invaluable service to families of the Cathedral avenue and Conduit road neighborhood.

There, every other Thursday morning, in a room ordinarily used for Sunday school sessions, mothers bring their children for preschool examinations, vaccinations or diptheria tests, or perhaps to have their eyes examined. While not intended to be an "emergency ward" or supplant a hospital, the clinic once set the broken nose of a lad struck by a baseball bat.

A registration fee of 25 cents, a nickel a visit and the cost of materials are sole charges at the center, which is not only self-supporting, but which actually came out $68 ahead last year. Only overhead is for janitor service.

Dr. Grace A. Purse, supervisor; Mrs. C. A. Peterson, Mrs. John Balster, Mrs. Effie McKinsey and Mrs. G. R. Lee, who helped to organize the clinic several years ago under the auspices of the New Idea Society of the church, are still active in the project, which not only serves the immediate community, but also Tenleytown, Georgetown, University Park and even Virginia.

Another cofounder is Dr. Oscar J. Randall, pastor of the Potomac Heights Church, first interdenominational congregation in Washington. About November 13 it will occupy its new building near the site of the present edifice. Mrs. Jane Hessman is clinic treasurer.

The congregation recently named M. H. Hess superintendent of the Sunday school, and also the following other officers: Assistant superintendent, D. K. Correll; treasurer, N. Watkins; secretaries, Charles Rodgers, Axel Jorgensen and Mrs. Mildred Hess; superintendent of junior department, Mrs. W. J. Chambers; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. Anne Cushman; assistant superintendent, Mrs. George W. Morse; home department and cradle roll superintendents, Mrs. John A. Stine, E. H. Witzke and H. S. Townley; enrollment secretary, M. H. Hess; pianists, Miss Evelyn Thring, Miss Sadie Tapp and Miss Elaine Stebbins.

"The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise" will be Dr. Randall's subject tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, with Mrs. W. M. Hutcheson bringing a vocal message. Dr. R. M. Charles, teacher of the Randall Bible Class, and Mrs. Charles will entertain the class at a reception Wednesday night in the parish hall.

"Reality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 45:6: "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever: the scepter of thy kingdom is a right scepter."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea." (Revelation 21:1.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "In St. John's vision, heaven and earth stand for spiritual ideas, and the sea, as a symbol of tempest-tossed human concepts advancing and receding, is represented as having passed away."

Guest Minister Brings a Story Of Garfield Here

Old-time Washingtonians may recall something familiar in the name of Dr. Edwin Errett, of Cincinnati, speaking tomorrow at National City Christian Church—something to remind them of President Garfield.

For Garfield was a regular attendant of the little frame chapel, first building owned by the Christian Church congregation. In this chapel Guiteau, the President's assassin, is believed to have first planned to kill Garfield. And it was the Rev. Isaac Errett, great-uncle of the present Dr. Errett, who preached the dedicatory sermon for that chapel, June 27, 1869.

Garfield himself helped the Rev. Mr. Errett start a paper, the Christian Standard, which the present Dr. Errett edits. And to top it off, the Rev. Isaac Errett, in Cleveland in September, 1881, preached the assassinated President Garfield's funeral sermon, after having taken part in the services here.

Love Trouble Bothers Actress On Met. Screen

'Secrets of an Actress' Expands Triangle Into 4-Sided Story of Stage

"SECRETS OF AN ACTRESS." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Milton Krims, Rowland Leigh and Julius J. Epstein, starring Kay Francis, with George Brent, Ian Hunter, Gloria Dickson, Isabel Jeans, Penny Singleton, Dennie Moore and Herbert Rawlinson. Directed by William Keighley. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Both backstage and upstage is the story of "Secrets of an Actress." Not that the title's titillation is strictly descriptive, for Kay Francis is again the perfect lady, daughter of a famed theatrical family, and her life seems to be an open book.

The favorite triangle situation is yanked into a quadrangle (not that anything's on the square) to furnish forth complications. Both George Brent and Ian Hunter are in love with Kay. But Kay loves only George, and his wife, Gloria Dickson, is definitely hostile for purely financial reasons.

Certain difficulties attend the Francis characterization. True, she's again a career woman, but an expert actress is also essentially a sophisticate, also highly practical. The combination of attributes is well and honestly interpreted by Miss Frances, but the role evidently offered some tough going. One imagines that she must have said at some point, "But I just can't get my teeth in the darned part." It's a pleasure to say that she's as creamily lovely as ever, as essentially fine an actress as ever.

Hunter Misses Again!

Po' Ian Hunter! Always the worthy fall guy. It's the same story in this one. Handsome, smart, bighearted, it is still his fate to fix up everything for other people and come out of the little end of the horn himself. He "angels" Kay's show, puts her on top of the world, donates her to Brent and then even persuades George's poisonous wife to start to Reno leaving the road clear for true love. Anyway, he steals all possible scenes—and that's something.

As for George Brent. This critic can take Mr. Brent or leave him, but much prefers the latter. To our frankly bored eyes, it seemed that George strolled and mugged his way through the celluloid in a manner quite up to his usual standard. Also, he's getting pretty mature for a glamor boy.

What can only be described as a first-rate second-rate performance was offered by Gloria Dickson as Brent's gold-digging wife. She did her role perfectly—but too consistently and without shading, seeing it only in black and white. But perhaps that wasn't Gloria's fault, for the picture as a whole suggests a certain dramatic color-blindness that certainly must be credited to direction.

In pacing and general entertainment qualities, including some very passable comedy sequences, "Secrets of an Actress" offers a reasonably pleasant and exciting hour or so.

Porky Scores Hit

But we have a big rave for one sector of the Metropolitan show. It's the cartoon short, "Porky in Wackyland," revealing Porky in search of the legendary dodo bird and meeting all sorts of strange beings. You'll see the man with three heads whose "mother was scared by a pawnbroker's sign," a marvelous fairyland flower, out of which pops a one-man-band, other delightful madhouse fancies. Ten bonuses and endless extra jobs should be wished on the screw-ball genius who figured out "Wackyland." The other end of the scale of humor is shown in a Western short called "A Western Welcome." But one can't have everything.

The newsreel shows the havoc wrought by the tropical hurricane that lost its way and busted around Long Island and New England. The destruction is appalling and makes one hope that hurricanes will in the future stick to their own bailiwick in the Caribbean. A minor hurricane is staged by Senator Key Pittman who gets quite indignant about the European crisis but tells you nothing you didn't know before.

Palace

"Marie Antoinette," costarring Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power, with John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Joseph Schildkraut, Reginald Gardiner, Gladys George, Joseph Calleia, almost 100 other speaking parts and an ensemble of thousands, continues to strengthen its hold on the public mind as one of the most imposing screen spectacles ever made in this or any other country. It entered its third week of enthusiastic patronage at Loew's Palace Theater yesterday.

Although this sumptuous spectacle-drama is dated in the French Revolutionary period, it centers attention upon the character of the hapless queen whose name it bears. "Marie Antoinette" is in no sense a tedious lesson in history. It is, on the contrary, a magnificently embellished character study, rich in romance, humor, beauty and tragedy. In minor respects it deviates from the accepted versions of certain incidents as they are recorded in the history books; in the main, it is authentic, believable and immensely moving.

Miss Shearer, by her performance in the title role, takes rank as the foremost actress of the cinema. The incomparable brilliance and variety of her work is fairly matched by the tremendously pathetic impersonation of the Dauphin by Robert Morley, who, by this one portrayal, has leaped to the forefront of contemporary character actors. Barrymore's Louis XV is another fine bit of drawing. If there is a flaw anywhere in the entire roster of players, indeed, it might be traced to the extreme repression practiced by Tyrone Power as the elusive love of the queen doomed to die on the guillotine.

Many of the court scenes partake of a quality of magnificence that has seldom, if ever, been equaled on the silver sheet. In point of costuming, the picture is no less rich in harmonious beauty.

It took courage to make "Marie Antoinettte" on so grand a scale. It takes even more courage to refuse to see and enjoy it as a subject that comes dangerously near deserving the name of masterpiece.

Colbert in "Midnight"

Claudette Colbert will be starred in Paramount's forthcoming "Midnight," a romantic modern comedy by Edwin Justus Mayer and Franz Schulz which Arthur Hornblow jr., will produce with Mitchell Leisen directing.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Four Daughters,' at Earle, Is a Sterling Work; Capitol's Birthday Bill Features 'My Lucky Star'

Youthful Cast in Fannie Hurst Story; Morris and Davis Hits on Stage

"FOUR DAUGHTERS." Warner Brothers picturization of Fannie Hurst's novel of "Sister Act," adapted to the screen by Julius J. Epstein featuring Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn and John Garfield, with Claude Rains, May Robson, Lola Lane, Gale Page, Rosemary Lane, Dick Foran and Frank McHugh. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Previewed Tuesday, September 20. At the Earle Theater.

In "Four Daughters," their picturization of Fannie Hurst's story of "Sister Act," the Warner Brothers have captured the joys, the sorrows and the courageous spirit of the average American home with such completeness as to make the picture memorable as a sympathetic and believable human document. Although during its length it encounters virtually all of the emotions to which humanity is heir, this skillfully fashioned excursion into the intimacies of American home life, the problems of ambitious youth and the perplexities of those who are walking the shady twilight of life, never permits itself to descend from a high level of naturalness and plausibility.

BELL

The story begins on a gay note and persists in a vein of agreeable comedy so long as Adam Lemp's four charming daughters form their romantic attachments or profess a lifelong determination to remain single and devote their lives to each other and their father and their aunt. Thea, socially ambitious, is first to plight her troth to the scandalously wealthy Ben Crowley, who has fabulous motor cars and orchids at his prodigal command. Her sister Kay looks forward to the day when she will be a great artiste at the height of a musical career. Ann and Emma pledge themselves to spinsterhood, despite the bashful advances of Ernest, an ardent but inarticulate native swain.

Romance Comes to Town

So do the four motherless daughters of a musical father and the wards of his devoted sister arrange their futures as the story initiates its surprising train of events. To the Lemp home comes one day the jaunty and aggressive Felix, a composer, who takes his music a little less seriously than he takes himself and all those about him. To orchestrate his tone poems, Felix introduces Mickey Borden into the household—a bitter young defeatist, whose life has been an unbroken procession of frustrations. It is his appearance in the tranquil little town that sounds the first warning of the sinister events that are to interrupt the happiness of the Lemps and create problems that seem overwhelming. An impetuous act of self destruction, after Mickey has married Ann on the very day she was to have wed Ernest, makes possible the resumption of their orderly and mutually helpful lives.

This major movement of the story has been given realism, vigor and sprightly humor by the introduction of many deft bits of by-play, the simple recreations of a kindly and contented family and the ultimate adjustment of Emma's thwarted love and Ernest's equally disturbing desertion at the altar.

The play has been adroitly directed by Michael Curtiz, who was given the advantage of an exceptionally well chosen cast. In all justice, three comparative newcomers to roles of importance on the screen are featured above the sturdy veterans who lend distinction to the ensemble. They are Priscilla Lane, who is rapidly developing into an uncommonly fine young actress; Jeffrey Lynn, who profited handsomely by Errol Flynn's recent enthusiasm for long yachting trips, and John Garfield, recruited from the New York stage to acquit himself with fine credit in his first film. By every right of superior performance, Gale Page also should be included in this group. Miss Page is the Emma of the story; Priscilla Lane, the Ann, baby of the family; Mr. Lynn, Felix, and Garfield, the moody Mickey. There are moments when the Garfield method of deliberateness and repression is suggestive of the Spencer Tracy technique.

Picture And Stage on Par

The remaining sisters are impersonated by Lola and Rosemary Lane, Ben Crowley by Frank McHugh and Ernest by Dick Foran. The fine role of the father is lent the full impressiveness of Claude Rain's skill and experience and Aunt Etta is portrayed with comparable perfection by May Robson. The musical interpolations that are made an integral part of the action contribute further charm to a picture of high purpose and admirable execution.

The new stage bill at the Earle takes its place on an even footing with the excellence of the screen feature. Wayne Morris and Johnny Davis, two of the cinema's most popular young men, appearing in person, coheadline the vaudeville program in individual and joint enterprises. Davis singing and playing his trumpet, and Morris chattering amiably on a variety of subjects and pretending to play a cornet as well as his partner does. The illusion is perfect, but it is Johnny who does all the tooting. The overpacked house greeted them thunderously at yesterday's first performance.

The 16 Dancing Roxyettes open the bill and appear later in several tricky routines, the final one on bicycles in intricate maneuvers, and are followed by Paul LaVarre & Co., in an amazing interval of seriocomic athleticism. Mario and Floria repeat their earlier triumph in a series of their incomparable ballroom dances.

The newsreel and Jo Lombardi's orchestral interludes complete an entertainment that suggests that the Earle's seating capacity should be double what it is.

Pith Helmets

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Stablemates" company resembled an African hunting party, when Director Sam Wood brought them all pith helmets to wear in the sun at Hollywood Park.

Lucky 'Skates' and a Skater

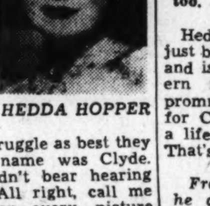

RICHARD GREENE, SONJA HENIE, CESAR ROMERO as they appear in the principal romantic roles in "My Lucky Star," screen feature of the eleventh aniversary bill at Loew's Capitol Theater. In this subject Miss Henie surpasses all of her previous feats as the world's foremost feminine ice skater

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 23.—What's in a name? It's news when Clyde Corrigan changed his to Doug. Did it when he was 10. When Douglas Fairbanks, sr., made a personal appearance in San Antonio, Tex., he bought a paper from a boy, patted him on the back, gave him a dime and said, "Keep the change, kid." Corrigan was the kid.

HEDDA HOPPER

Shortly after this his father left his mother and himself to struggle as best they could. Father's name was Clyde. His mother couldn't bear hearing it, so he said, "All right, call me Doug." He's seen every picture the Fairbanks father and son have ever made. Couldn't keep his eyes off Doug. jr. when he visited RKO studio the other day.

Gertie Lawrence sent all her British friends telegrams asking what she'd done that she was so neglected. The local British contingent attended her opening in force, but not one took the trouble to go backstage and see her after the play. Their excuse was that Hollywood was so far away. What they should have said was that they had to hustle back to parties—that they were so overcome by flashlights, fans, hoopla, that friend Gertie was lost in the shuffle.

I love Gypsy Rose Lee's line about herself after seeing "My Lucky Star." "If that's me, something's got to be done about it."

Why not go back to her act which made her famous Here we've hung her with enough clothes to smother ten Eskimos.

Frances Dee and Joel McCrea are taking that belated honeymoon. Motoring and antiquing from New York to Maine. Joel promised to stop at every shop.

When Esther Roark, Lester Donahue, Sidney Fish and I arrived at Attorney Jerry Powell's house for dinner Luise Rainer was just leaving. She's Jerry's landlady and stopped in to see if he was comfortable, or if there was anything she could do for him. And that's the girl we've called indifferent.

"Legs" Raye—Martha to you—is showing them at the Paramount Theater, and the Legion boys are lapping up her lusty entertainment. They don't care for our herring shadow type of female. It's smart showing Jimmy Hogan's picture, "Sons of the Legion," on the same bill. It's good, too.

Hedy LaMarr is here to stay. She just bought a house in Beverly Hills and is furnishing it herself in modern manner. Reggie Gardner's promised to put in a swimming pool for Christmas. And he's finishing a life size portrait of her in oil. That's mixing oil and water.

Frank Capra got almost what he deserved in Life—six pages. But they could have given him the whole magazine without hurting our feelings. Harry K. Thaw's back in our village. Wonder whom he'll discover this time. Wasn't Anita Page one of his proteges?

Special "Welcome" mats are being woven of blonde hair for Mayor LaGuardia, who's arriving on the 23rd.

We don't pay much attention to John Boles. But legionnaires do. They asked that he open their convention.

Never before saw so many men at a fashion show as Jaeckel pulled in at the Victor Hugo. Irene Selznick said they came to see what they'd been paying for for many years. They'll be willing to pay for the new ones. Can't help it—they're so beautiful. What I'd like to see and never have is a chinchilla coat with a sweeping train. My idea of elegance.

Kate Lawson, who designed sets and costumes for Theater Guild and Guthrie McClintic, has been called to New York to do the costumes in "Knights of Song." Nigel Bruce will be in it.

A postcard from Sabu, Indian boy who made such a hit in "Drums," saying "Thanks for telling people I wind my own turban. After valeting an elephant, wouldn't it be silly for me to hire one to wind a 12-foot piece of silk around my head?"

Columbia

Repeating the history it has made in all parts of the country, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Irving Berlin's "cavalcade of music," yesterday entered the second week of its return engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater, already having played two weeks a block up F street at the Palace.

The popularity of this unusual work is fully warranted. It visualizes a story that abounds in humor, romance and heartbreak, is interpreted by a cast that could scarcely be improved upon in the matter of congenial assignments and is graced by a tuneful score comprised of some two dozen of the most popular songs Irving Berlin ever wrote. The selection of musical numbers covers the span of years from 1911, when "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was introduced, to the present. Two new numbers were written especially for this production—"Now It Can Be Told" and "My Walking Stick."

The story of the rise of a little honky-tonk band on San Francisco's Barbary Coast to the dignity of a concert in Carnegie Hall, New York, is enacted by Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Paul Hurst, Ethel Merman, Jean Hersholt, Helen Westley, John Carradine, Jack Haley, Wally Vernon and scores more.

The romantic and wartime episodes in the play are among its most effective intervals and about the entire action there hovers a nostalgic charm that multiplies in direct proportion to the length of one's memory in the theater.

The supplementary features of the bill continue with the major subject, except for a new issue of the "News of the Day."

Crosby Gives Organ

A $1,600 organ was installed in St. Charles Church, North Hollywood, as the gift of Bing Crosby, who sang at a sacred concert given in connection with its inaugural. A coincidence is that he was a choir singer in "Sing You Sinners."

Sonja Henie Wins Favor in New Film; Stan Kavanagh Heads the Stage Bill

"MY LUCKY STAR." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettinger, adapted to the screen by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, with music by Gordon and Revel, starring Sonja Henie, with Richard Greene, Joan Davis, Cesar Romero, Buddy Ebsen, Arthur Treacher, George Barbier, Louise Hovick, Billy Gilbert Patricia Wilder, Paul Hurst, Elisha Cook, jr., the Brewster Twins, Arthur Jarrett and others. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Previewed Wednesday, September 21. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

The spectacular skating scenes that bring "My Lucky Star" to an "Alice in Wonderland" ice finale are the factors that salvage this latest of Sonja Henie's stellar vehicles from the commonplace. The story is slightly dizzy. Even so, it is steadied now and again by musical interruptions devised by those master songsmiths, Gordon and Revel, and comedy scenes participated in with buoyant spirit by that grotesque comedienne, Joan Davis, and the elongated and drawling Mr. Buddy Ebsen.

It is the basic idea of the piece that makes it seem a little too much to swallow. This basic idea is that a young bundle wrapper in a Fifth avenue department store be togged out in the richest apparel the establishment can provide—and that is very rich, indeed—and circulated among the better institutions of higher learning throughout the land, as a sort of one-woman scholastic style show of winter sportswear, to help pull George Cabot and his son, Junior, out of the red and Junior, more particularly, out of an unfortunate entanglement with a beautiful night club gal.

Kristina Nielson never gets any farther than dear old Plymouth College. It is there that she collides with Larry Taylor, a handsome senior, and a large number of exceedingly jealous young coeds. It is there also that she becomes aware that she is involved in the Junior Cabot-Marcelle affair in an extremely embarrassing manner. The faculty learns of the matter, too. So Taylor, Junior, Kristina and practically the entire college enrollment decide to stage the Plymouth Ice Carnival in papa's elegant shop to get the money to pay off Marcelle and have the whole sorry business tossed out of court. Now I ask you!

Carnival "Wows" Them

However, that ice carnival does come off. The boys and girls have to strap the elder Cabot in a heavy chair, with a gag in his mouth, to convince him that the thing will be a success. The old man finally sees the light and everybody but him eventually gets back into the school from which they have been unceremoniously expelled.

And that ice carnival was a success, make no mistake about that. In it, the prodigious Henie executes skating feats that even she never before has undertaken. As has been stated here previously, Sonja borrows generously from the classic ballet technique to give her work on blades something of the grace and fluency of the dance in its finer forms. The "Alice in Wonderland" spectacle is a magnificent pageant of beauty in swift motion. The costuming would do credit to a Max Reinhardt stage production. And through it all Sonja Henie flashes on her steel blades like an inspired spright.

The cast with which Twentieth Century-Fox has surrounded its unique star is infinitely better than most of the material with which it has been supplied by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, authors of the screen play. Richard Greene is Miss Henie's new leading man, making his first appearance, I believe, since his introduction to American audiences in "Four Men and a Prayer." Mr. Greene, by his good looks and agreeable British speech, should take his early place in the front rank of the glamour boys. Cesar Romero does valiantly in the wholly unbelievable role of Cabot, fils.

Comedy Scenes Click

The comedy highlights fall almost exclusively to Joan Davis and Buddy Ebsen, and some of them are slightly higher highlights than usual. Mr. Ebsen, in tails and top hat, is almost funny enough for all practical purposes by himself. They have a song or two together and a dance or two, and all are top hole, as well as top hat. Other songs are judiciously scattered about among sleigh rides, undergraduate pep meetings and the like. The "Alice In Wonderland" sequences are done to music from Victor Herbert's "Toyland," than which there is no better.

The members of the numerous supporting cast, even including Louise Hovick, as has been said, are worthy of better material than has been given them. Roy Del Ruth's direction is peculiarly jerky, depriving the picture of the smooth-flowing continuity it should have.

The stage portion of the Capitol's eleventh anniversary bill is headlined by Stan Kavanagh, peer of all jugglers, who has added some new tricks to his repertoire since his last appearance here. He is definitely in a class by himself. Others who offer diverting specialties include Barr and Estes, in eccentric dances, and Starnes and Anavan, who offer a unique adagio routine in luminous costumes on a dark stage. Some of their effects are startling. Weaving in and out of the stage goings-on are both the Commodores, a double male quartet, and the 20 Chester Hale Capitol Dancers, who appear singly and jointly—with striking effectiveness in more than one colorful ensemble.

Fleas In Films

Two fleas, "Sam and Sadie," stars of the famous flea circus at Hubert's Museum in New York City, have been set to appear with Claudette Colbert and Herbert Marshall in "Zaza." They appear in a scene in which Miss Colbert searches for a flea in her blouse.

Actor's Luck

Work in the celebrated Hardy Family series of films proved lucky for a third member of the cast, when Rand Brooks was signed to a Metro-Goldwyn term contract and given a prominent rode in "Dramatic School," with Luise Rainer.

"Mr. Barton," Hoover warned, "some day I hope to make a speech against you."

JOHN L. LEWIS: The American Federation of Actors will start organization work in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia next week. Today the union leaders are conferring with Loew's officials to unionize all of New York's theaters which employ vaudeville actors—all, except Rockefeller's Radio City Music Hall . . . Lowell Thomas: Fox Movietone News is completing arrangements to be shown only in technicolor . . . Newspaper Guild: Capt. Patterson, publisher of the News, is at Doctors Hospital now . . . Hank Greenberg: Even if you don't break Ruth's record—and if you hit 57 homers—Heinz will offer you a contract for its "57 Varieties" ads.

JIM BARTON: Your Long Island baseball park was washed out by the floods . . . Ira Gershwin: Paul Whiteman, who introduced your brother's "Rapshody in Blue" at Carnegie Hall, will give another concert there Xmas night . . . Irving Berlin: Slim & Slam, authors of "Flat Foot Floogie on the Floy Floy," just finished their newest song—Vus Vilst du Gayly Star" . . . Ambassador Davis: Your daughter is sending strange messages to her friends on the back of a post card picture of Adolf Hitler.

ETHEL MERMAN: Ted Lewis will follow you as the featured act at the Strand Theater . . . Walt Disney: Lucille Linwood will get the Princess Ileana voice role in Paramount's full-length cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels."

HARRY WOODRING: At "The Midnight Son" yesterday, N. T. G. began introducing "A man of wealth, a great man who's done much good." Tommy Manville started to rise . . . "He's famous in the newspapers," N. T. G. continued. And Manville continued rising . . . "A great war hero," the introducer almost concluded . . . Manville sat down.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES: Dean Clark of Yale Law School is slated for the Circuit Court of Appeals judgeship here . . . Col. Batista: Despite the headlines about dictators, Gerardo Machado, former President of Cuba, emerged from retirement this week. At 2 a. m. Tuesday he danced a rhumba at the Havana-Madrid in New York . . . Mae West: Rudy Vallee has instructed his newest companion that he likes his girls dressed this way: long gloves covering the arms, long black hair, heavy lipstick and mascara, and dark gowns made only of satin.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Who Can't Find a Beau Wonders if Excellent Moral Character Is Inimical to Popularity

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 21 years of age. My problem is that of not being able to meet eligible young men. I work in the Government, but my work does not bring me in contact with men. I am a quiet girl and very shy—my shyness being one trait that I cannot overcome, although I have tried everything that I know. I don't drink or smoke or do anything for amusement except go to the theater.

Sometimes I think men like the fast type of girl who drinks and smokes and will carouse all night with them. Doesn't the quiet girl with good morals have any chance of finding a nice husband? I have never gone about much with boys and just don't seem to be the type of girl who attracts men. I am fairly good liking and dress well but am self-conscious and at a loss for conversation in the presence of strangers. If you can suggest some way for me to meet young persons, I shall be very glad. CANDIDA.

DEAR CANDIDA: Frankly, I am impatient with the physical and mental inertia of any young person who laments his inability to make friends. And particularly am I annoyed by the smug self-pity of that person who entertains the opinion that his high moral character is primarily responsible for his lack of popularity. Of recent years, newspapers, magazines and book-publishing houses have been showing an intelligent and unprecedented interest in the social art of "winning friends and influencing people" (see Dale Carnegie's famous volume on the subject), and reams of authoritative and eminently practicable advice are consequently at the disposal of any person who has the initiative to seek and apply it.

There is, for instance, the magazine, Your Life (it first appeared on the news stands last spring), which, since its inception, has dealt almost entirely with the subjects of personality development and social relationships. Such recognized authorities as Donald Laird, Dr. Louis E. Bisch, Margery Wilson, Paul Popenoe, Gelett Burgess and others are regular contributors to its pages. There is also Readers' Digest, whose every issue can be depended upon for one or more constructive articles along the same line.

There are books by Dr. Henry C. Link, Dr. David Seabury, Marjorie Barstow Greenbie, Margery Wilson, Dale Carnegie (above mentioned), as well as the whole list of textbooks used by some 250 leading colleges and universities in their so-called "marriage courses," which point the way to personal happiness and social success—considering, in exhaustive detail, all the pertinent "do's" and "don'ts" which make for magnetic personality, pleasing conduct and admirable character.

In addition to these sources, you have the better woman's magazines and the woman's pages of nearly all large daily newspapers as a continuous mine of information on how to make the best of your potential good points, and how to minimize your bad ones virtually out of existence; on what social opportunities exist and how to avail yourself of them. This department alone has discussed problems identical to yours on an average of at least once a month for the past five years, until it seems, almost, that there is nothing left to say on the subject, and that those who have found no profit in what has been said could find no profit in anything that might be said.

Naturally, personality problems are not to be solved by the merely academic approach. Theories must be translated into action. The individual must look to first-hand experience and experimentation as his greatest teacher in developing an adequate social technique. In other words, your salvation lies in making the most of your environmental opportunities for meeting young people.

Here in Washington, you have an almost endless array of possibilities to work with and choose from. There are the local Y. W. C. A.'s social programs for youth; the recreational and study program of the Community Center (sponsored by the District Department of Education); the mixed night classes of study at local universities and other educational centers; dancing classes, dramatic groups, the various girls' sororities, the social clubs in the various Government departments; the State societies; the young people's church groups; political study clubs; the junior groups of several prominent women's clubs; the Business and Professional Women's Club; the National Capital Park Service's outings every Sunday—and other activities too numerous to mention in this necessarily limited space.

In the face of such a list, to deplore your lack of opportunity for meeting people is to confess an almost total lack of personal resourcefulness. You are like a man starving in the midst of plenty, because he is either too stupid or too lazy to serve himself. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Inquiring Mind Best Teacher

ANOTHER humiliating moment for Madge. Poorly educated, she can't keep up with her college friends in their quiz game. But should we feel so sorry for her?

In a world crammed with easy ways to learn, lack of formal education is no reason to lag behind while others win interesting friends, good jobs.

Educate yourself. It takes only a little time each day—and once you get that "I want to know" spirit you find everything you do helping your "college course."

From the movie "Marie Antoinette" you get a vivid picture of the turbulent era in which the unhappy queen lost her head. What zest it gives to your reading of biography, historical novels.

In conversation, if someone uses a phrase like "in statu quo," you don't let it slide if you don't understand. You look up the phrase in a good dictionary, find it means roughly "as is." Easy while you're at it to check on other foreign phrases used by cultured people.

In your newspaper you read of such great men as Freud, famous for his phychological researches. Look up Freud in an outline of psychology, get a background of information for intelligent talk.

Quickly your "I want to know" spirit tones up your whole personality, makes you bright, interesting. And to give yourself confidence in any circle, back it up with a sound reading program of subjects college people study.

Black Velvet for Coquettes

WITCHERY of black velvet is seldom more enchanting than when strewn with waxy gardenias. The period gown, such as the one shown, has brought to light coquetries such as have not been practiced since artful girls of grandmother's day coyly dropped their fans. Cobwebby black lace fashions the fan being maneuvered here. Deshabille of dropped shoulders necessitates use of chokers, dog collars or long earrings to prevent too much nudity. A slim velvet band suspends a fragile lavaliere on this flirtatious lady's throat. Velvet has assumed many guises this fall, for rayon, acetate and pure silk yarns have been produced combining softness and durability, and the long-sought crush-resistant velvet has finally been made practical.

Brisk Walk Exercises 150 Body Muscles

Expert Advises Spending an Hour a Day Hiking, Preferably Up Hill, to Reduce Hip Line

FALL FROLICS into town and makes you want to get out and walk—which is a good thing for your figure, since it not only sets 150 muscles in motion, but places stress where stress is needed most, on the important muscles of the chest, abdomen, hips, thighs and legs.

If walking is your main activity, you should spend an hour a day at it and develop it into the type of exercise that will let you walk off with a good figure.

Stretch up with every step you take. Such posture points as "heads up," "chin level" and "shoulders back" are worth attention, but thinking of them separately is liable to give you a rigid posture, and rigidity is something to be avoided. It is important that the spine be straight, but the shoulders should be relaxed.

Single Posture Rule

A single posture rule to keep in mind is that the lower abdominal wall should constantly be pulled up, so that the lower part of the abdomen is flat. This upward pull of the lower abdominal muscles should extend right on up through the chest and the top of the head. Then with the weight perfectly balanced and the toes pointed straight ahead, you are all set for a smooth, easy gait and you will cut a good figure on your walk.

Oddly enough, walking is a much more effective chest developing measure than the old deep-breathing routines. You use oxygen only on the demand of your muscles, and bodily exercise, which promotes spontaneous deep-breathing, is the secret of adequate oxygenation. Brisk exercise increases your need for oxygen and your ability to use it.

Hill-Climging Helps

Pulling up with the lower abdominal muscles tends to flatten this portion of your figure, and stretching upward as you stand or walk has a slimming effect on the waist, but walking on the level is not especially slimming for the hips. In order to effectively use the gluteal muscles of the hips and reduce the fat pads, the legs must be brought up to an angle of 45 degrees at the hips. For this reason, hill-climbing is excellent for the figure that is too heavy through the hips.

A Woman's New York

—by Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 23.

YOU MAY remember that something over a year ago one of our periodical purity waves rolled over this great Gomorrah, washing out that odd and depressing antic known as "the burlesque strip-tease"—in the course of which a beautiful and shapely young lady peels straight to the buff. The very word burlesque was summarily forbidden, and when its greatest exponent, Miss Gypsy Rose Lee, was exported to Hollywood she was promptly relabeled "Louise Hovick," her real name, so that the purity of the Nation's 20,000,000 film fans was safe!

ALICE HUGHES.

These cycles of civic chastity, as is well known, come and go—even in such hotbeds of the vice of gambling as Saratoga. Now, according to my aging spouse, who is my star reporter for all such evil matters, the purity wave has rolled back again, and the young ladies' white bones are again exposed on the sinful beaches of Times Square. After a tour of that dismal district in his wheel chair the little old man reports that the ladies are peeling again.

Yes, the famous strippers are again doing business at the old stands—all save Gypsy Rose Hovick, who still slaves in Hollywood, fully clothed. Such great practitioners of this delicate art as Miss Ann Corio, Miss Margie Hart, Miss Georgia Sothern, Miss Marie Cord and Mrs. Kingfish Levinsky are again displaying the fragile nuances of their genius before good-sized audiences in the City of New York. This is something of a moot subject. Is there a general letting down of the moral fences in view of the approaching World's Fair? Or are we just slipping back into our traditional American position of the wickedest American city there is? The truth is, of course, that we are no more wicked than any other. Merely bigger and noisier. Moral or not, it is nice the girls are making a living.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of artistically earthy matters and that fair of ours, I hear that Miss Mae West, for several years Garbo's screen rival, will return to Broadway for the emergency, and will exhibit her robust art in a masterpiece called "The World's Worst Woman." She's helping write it, of course. Aunt Mae earned phenomenal sums in Hollywood, and is now wealthy enough to devote herself exclusively to the better things of the spoken drama . . . Of course, she may pick up a few more shillings for her pet charities while here.

The millinery departments here are lavishly peddling an elastic hat-band made of real hair, braided. It was originally designed by John and Fred and is, of course, to help out the skimmer and the up-swish back locks. Locks upon locks.

Fred Kiesler, a brilliant little designer and architect friend of mine who lectures at Columbia, is more popular than ever among the men around town since they learned that he is the uncle of Hedy Lamarr, the blazing beauty who made her American bow in "Algiers."

The Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers is now launched on its second year and offers two evening courses for girls who toil by day. Fashion advertising is being taught by Bernice Fitzgibbon and Estelle Hamburger, probably our two most brilliant practitioners of that art, and Hope Skillman is giving a course in fabrics.

The sun shines again for old Aunt Alice, now that my favorite face and hair specialist in all this world, Rosie Laird, is back from a long European holiday. Maybe Rose can do something with my comical back hair, which now looks like a clothes brush gone crazy.

Of course, Broadway is minus a "Follies" this fall, which gives it an oddly spotty look, but Lee Shubert says he is just holding off until nearer World's Fair time, when he will put on a mighty girly show at the Winter Garden—perhaps with Aunt Sophie Tucker and Uncle Bobby Clark in the troupe. Whoops!

Beat in 4 tablespoons of melted butter. Add dry ingredients all at once and stir just enough to mix well. Bake on hot waffle iron.

Child's Dessert.

Children often like banana "boats" filled with frozen foods or fresh fruits. Split bananas in half, lengthwise. Remove the centers carefully. Sprinkle the bananas with a little lemon or grapefruit juice—to prevent the fruit from darkening. Then stuff them with the selected mixture.

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay

'See You in Washington'.

THE WOMAN on the train is friendly. What is more, civilized. She smiles and makes room for you at the mirror in the Pullman dressing room instead of eyeing you appraisingly and antagonistically. Afterward through the long afternoon on the stiff green plush seats you exchange confidences concerning permanents, waistline exercises and the idiosyncrasies of men. You bid her goodby regretfully . . . "Now be sure to look me up the very next time you're in Washington."

YOUR BEST FRIEND gives a luncheon in your honor. All the old girls are there—Esther, Grace, Mary, Adelaide. The salad is perfect, the rolls light as eiderdown. The lights are soft, the gossip exhilarating. It IS nice to see old friends again . . . though so hard to say goodbye . . . "When are coming to Washington, Esther?" . . . "Now Grace, surely George can drive you and the children there next summer" . . . "Mary you'll be on for the World's Fair" . . . "Adelaide, you really ought to show Junior the Capital."

ON SOBER reflection you decide to curb your expansiveness. Memories of past surprise visitors rise to haunt you. So when callers come you dwell disparagingly on the Washington climate. Also on how busy you are . . . how terribly busy. The callers listen sympathetically. They tell you how well you look, how glad they are to see you, how much they have missed you. They hope you will come back soon, that they won't have to wait so long to see you again . . . "Well," you hear yourself saying, "what is the matter with your coming to Washington?"

AT CHURCH you hold court after services. "Do you remember me?" . . . "This is Ethel's husband" . . . "Have you seen Sara's baby?" . . . "Oh, you're not going back THAT soon?" It is heartwarming, yet bewildering. You suddenly find yourself very tired. Your tongue drips bromides. You are "so glad . . . so glad . . . yes, so sorry to go so soon, but—" You find yourself blithely uttering it on every goodby, "Oh well you'll be coming to Washington."

AT YOUR friend's tea you confront a roomful of strange faces. Well, this is one time you will show some restraint. You find yourself stranded with another stranger. She lives in Chicago . . . has a sister-in-law in Washington. People around you are talking of "Dot's divorce," "Gertrude's sinus." You and the woman from Chicago become bosom friends. You urge her to visit her sister-in-law in Washington . . . and look you up. Later you make other acquaintances. Many of them make frequent trips to Washington. You hysterically insist that they look you up. Perfectly strange guests tell you goodby, hope to see you back in town soon. And of course you hope to see all of them in Washington.

RETURNING on the train you are a little homesick and lonely, a perfect pushover for the sympathetic woman across the aisle. In the observation car a bighearted man lends you his newspaper, explains the war situation. A young girl on her way to college becomes your protege. As the train approaches the station, you find it hard to part with your fascinating friends . . . "Yes, good by, and if you're ever in Washington" . . . "Yes, do look me up." . . . "Oh yes, of course everybody comes to Washington."

RIDING HOME in the taxicab contemplating the old grind ahead, you come to your senses. Why you have definitely invited about 100 persons to Washington! And at least 99 of them will come. You vision them descending on you in airplanes, trailers, motor car caravans. For one panicky moment you consider halting the taxi driver, going back to the station and taking a train for New York . . . San Francisco . . . anywhere. Still—they won't begin to come yet awhile . . . maybe not till next summer.. And possibly by that time you can manage a trip to Abyssinia.

Schiaparelli's Trend Is to Bigger Buttons

Paris (U.P.).—There is a tendency toward bigger buttons. Schiaparelli introduces round cornelian discs a good two inches in diameter. Three of the giant buttons fasten a peach-colored coat of suede cloth, loosely made, for wear with a black dress. Vera Borea puts huge square buttons of tortoise shell on a gray knit ensemble with a porcelain blue crocheted blouse.

Dainty yellow china buttons make a delightful contrast for a deep pink wood dress.

Molyneux's New Skating Silhouette

For the Autumn afternoons of a very chic lady . . . a dress to wear with high-hair distinction. Skirt as spinning as Sonja Henie's . . . spindle waist . . . very high square neck and short sleeves, both a-flash with rhinestones. Exquisitely fashioned of fine rayon crepe in charcoal black or high-fashion purple, for misses, $49.75.

To be found in the French Room's new Fall collection, $49.75 to $75. Second Floor.

French Air Attache To Delay Departure

Must Stay in Capital for Another Month
Farewell Party Held Despite Postponement
Couple Honored at Embassy Dinner

The Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Norbert Champsaur invited 250 people to a farewell cocktail party yesterday—only to receive a cable a few hours before from the air ministry saying Col. Champsaur must remain another month in Washington. They had expected to sail this week for Paris, where Col. Champsaur will assist in work in the aircraft factories.

Nevertheless, the party went off as planned, and very sucessfully, too. So did the dinner which the French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, gave in their honor last evening. This latter party was attended only by members of the embassy staff.

Hostess Gets Up From Sickbed

Yesterday was Mme. Champsaur's first day out after an illness, and she couldn't have picked a more strenuous one. However, she was her usual pretty and pleasant self, wearing a black and white gown with a pearl necklace and ear-rings of brilliants. A corsage of orchids completed her ensemble.

Capt. Jean Weiser, who will succeed Col. Champsaur as Air Attache, was present yesterday. He is looking for a house, and as soon as he finds one big enough for his wife and six children, they will join him from Paris. He landed in New York earlier in the week, having previously been stationed in Dijon.

Yesterday's buffet was a very lavish one, with lots of different kinds of sandwiches, notably some made with melted cheese and crackers. Martinis, highballs, and orange juice also were in evidence.

Autumn Costumes In Gathering

In deference to its being the first day of autumn yesterday, many of those present wore fall costumes. Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, wore a fur cape over her black ensemble. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; they were neighbors of the Champsaurs last summer at Bluemont.

Mrs. Bloom and her daughter will go to New York October 6 to await the November elections. Representative Bloom is the only candidate on the Democratic ticket running for Congress.

Practically the entire staff of the French Embassy was present yesterday. The naval attache, Commander Pierre Benech, was accompanied by his wife and their houseguests, M. and Mme. Dugnin, of Paris, who will be here for a few days.

Mme. Lombard, wife of the military attache of the embassy, wore a smart black frock with touches of pink and a black hat with a flaring brim. Countess de Gramont of the embassy was also in black.

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter were making their first public appearance since their recent return from Cohasset, Mass., where they spent the summer. Mme. Peter wore a print and one of her usual off-the-face hats.

Mrs. George T. Pettingill, wife of the Commandant of the Navy Yard, was among the guests. She was attired in a becoming russet color.

From the Army Air Corps came Lieut. Col. Howard C. Davidson, who was accompanied by Mrs. Davidson. Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, was present, and others included the Military Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boetticher; Dr. James Alexander Lyon, and Mlle. DeChennes, who resides with Commander and Mme. Benech.

Duffeys to Fete Miss Winmill

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph G. Duffey, the latter formerly Miss Viola Winmill, will entertain at a luncheon party today in compliment to Miss Virginia Winmill and Robert H. Radsch, whose wedding will take place this afternoon at St. James Episcopal Church, Warrenton, Va.

"Pickett Mountain Farm," the Duffey's new home, will be the scene of the luncheon, at which guests will include members of the bridal party. The rehearsal dinner was given at the North Wales Club last evening immediately following the rehearsal at the church. Guests included members of the bridal party and a number of other persons who are in Warrenton primarily to attend the wedding.

Cavalry Chief, Chilean Horsemen Luncheon Guests

Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, Chief of Cavalry, and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Inter-American Horse Show Association, were guests at a luncheon given yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel by Thomas P. Morgan, jr., secretary-treasurer of the association.

Members of the Chilean Army Horse Show team who were guests of honor were Maj. Eduardo Yanez, captain of the team; Capt. Pelayo Izurrieta, Capt. Hernan Vergil and Capt. Guillermo Castro.

Mrs. Lawrence W. Robert, jr., chairman of the women's entertainment committee, also was a guest with Dr. William McClellan, Maj. Renn Lawrence, U. S. A., and Col. A. Kenny C. Palmer, of the Chilean-American Association.

F. H. Joneses Due Back Today

Mr. and Mrs. F. Henry Jones, of 4971 Hillbrook lane, will return to Washington from New York today. They will be accompanied by their daughter, Miss Emilie Jones, and her cousin, Miss Ann Guthrie, who will enter the Madeira School next week. The two girls spent the summer at camp in Vermont.

Earlier in the summer Mr. and Mrs. Jones made an extended motor trip to the West Coast. Returning to Washington a few weeks ago, they stayed until last week, when they went to West Springfield, Mass., to exhibit some of the prize cattle from their "Ayrlawn Farms" in Maryland.

The cattle are now marooned in New England, owing to the recent storm and flood, but Mr. and Mrs. Jones and their daughter and niece had already left Massachusetts for New York before the disaster.

Regatta Queen And Court Guests At Supper, Dance

Miss Elizabeth Reed, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Allen B. Reed, who was crowned Queen of the President's Cup Regatta pageant, was entertained at supper with members of her court in the Shar-Zad room of the Carlton Hotel last evening by the members of the regatta executive committee.

She and her attendants, 14 in all, attended the supper dance at the Metronome Room of the Wardman Park Hotel later in the evening.

Miss Juliet Kibbey and Miss Salley Kibbey from Magdelena Senora, Mexico, are the guests of Mrs. Laura Field Cheatham and her mother, Mrs. James Gaben Field in Washington. The Misses Kibbey have just recently returned from a summer trip to Europe.

MISS MARGARET JESCHKE, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Richard H. Jeschke, will bow to society at a tea which will be given on December 26 at Portledge, the home of Mrs. John R. Devereux on Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase. With Miss Jeschke in this picture is her pet Pekingese, Napoleon.

Spanish Poet's Sister Here

Senorita Isabel Garcia Lorca, sister of the famous Spanish poet, Frederico Garcia Larco, who was killed early in the war, will spend a large part of the winter with the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios.

A close friend of their daughter, Senorita Laura de los Rios, the young lady will land at New York today on the liner Champlain and will be met there by Senora de los Rios and her daughter.

Senorita Lorca decided to come to this country when her other brother, Juan Garcia Larco, who has been serving as First Secretary of the Spanish embassy at Brussels, was called to the colors. She will make frequent visits to Senorita de los Rios, who will teach Spanish at Wellesley College this winter, going on immediately to Wellesley from New York.

Panama Envoy's Wife to Sponsor Ship Launching

The Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd left yesterday for Quincy, Mass., where Senora de boyd will act today as sponsor at the launching of The Panama. The ceremony is scheduled to take place at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

The Panama is the first of the three cargo-passenger steamers now under construction for the Panama Railroad Steamship Line.

Brig. Gen. George P. Tyner, Assistant Chief of Staff, will represent the Secretary of War at the ceremony.

The Minister and Senora de Boyd are expected to return early next week. They were accompanied by the attache of the legation, Miguel J. Moreno, jr.

Austin Preston Leaves Capital After Visit

He has entered his son, Austin R. Preston, jr., in Taft School, Watertown, Conn., and is now visiting his sisters at his home in Buffalo, N. Y. He will sail for Norway on October 5.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

A number of Washington residents spent yesterday being thankful they had returned from summer vacations on Long Island or in New England ahead of the hurricane.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt received word that the house they occupied at Wainscott, near Southampton, was now a wreck, with the front entirely bashed in by falling trees. Fortunately, however, the Finkenstaedts, who returned to the Capital last week, had only rented the place.

Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed left Nantucket Monday evening, just in time, and are in their apartment at the Mayflower. They have been joined by their younger son, Stanley, jr., who has been in Europe this summer. He will leave the first of next month for a new job in New York where his older brother, John, is also following in their father's footsteps.

MRS. LEONARD BLOCK hasn't yet heard the fate of her Nantucket cottage, which is directly on the ocean. She returned only a few days ago. Others who missed the excitement by only a brief interval are Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, who spent the summer at the Sayre cottage on Martha's Vineyard, and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, whose house at Marion, Mass., was smack in the storm center.

Nothing has been heard from Mrs. Richard Southgate, who left Hyannis a short time ago and has been at Centerville, Long Island. She is expected to return next week.

Washington friends of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Waggaman are anticipating exciting first-hand stories on their return to the Capital, as they still are at their Nantucket cottage, where they intended to remain until well into October.

Nearly everybody we ran into yesterday was reluctantly remaining in Washington because unable to make train connections to New England. Laura de los Rios, daughter of the Spanish Ambassador, intended to leave Wednesday to start giving Spanish lessons at Wellesley College, but had to postpone her departure.

Barbara Donald, who returned from a summer on the West Coast yesterday, is visiting until trains can get through to Boston, where her family resides. After a day or two there she will motor back and will live this winter with Jane Watson and Eileen O'Daniel in their house in Georgetown. Baroness Serge Korff, the former Alice Graeme, shared this cunning little home with Miss Watson before she was married.

Commissioner Matthews, of the SEC, and several of his assistants, we hear, got left in Boston during the hurricane, and had to commmunicate with the office here by radio. However, Stranded somewhere in New England are the First Secretary of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. van Troostenburg de Bruyn, who were on a motor trip. The Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, at their summer home on Cape Cod, also are incommunicado.

DOROTHY THOMPSON'S mention in her column the other day of Dr. Hans Thomsen, of the German Embassy staff, reminds us that it was at his apartment in Berlin that she first met Sinclair Lewis. The two frequently used to visit the Thomsens there of an evening and their names are among those signed in the diplomat's well-filled guest book.

REBECCA WELLINGTON, who returned recently from a vacation of several weeks, is staying with Mr. and Mrs. David Finley, having sublet her apartment on Connecticut avenue. She motored through New England, visiting friends en route.

Luckenbachs Now in Texas

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Alexander Luckenbach, whose marriage took place here Wednesday, are now at San Antonio, Tex., where they will be feted at a reception given by the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Luckenbach.

All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church was scene of the noon ceremony at which the Rev. H. D. Sterrett officiated. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white mousseline de soie, fashioned with a fitted bodice, a full skirt and puffed sleeves. Her finger tip veil was held by a halo of orange blossoms and long lace mitts completed her costume. Her bouquet was of white roses, carnations and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Charles Waggaman Neill, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She also wore white mousseline de soie and her bouquet was of American beauty roses and lilies of the valley. Elizabeth Bell Neill, niece of the bride, was flower girl and Charles Waggaman Neill, jr., was ring bearer.

Garrah Everett was best man and ushers were Charles Waggaman Neill and Walter McCaddam. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, following which the couple left on a wedding trip. On their return they will make their home at 2902 Porter street.

The former Miss Bell is a granddaughter of the late Gen. and Mrs. George Bell and of Mrs. William Gerlach and the late Col. Gerlach. She attended George Washington University. Mr. Luckenbach is a graduate of St. Mary's College, San Antonio, and now is connected with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Frances Schulte Bride Of Frank B. Burdsall, Jr.

Before an altar decorated with white gladioli and palms, Miss Frances Cavans Schulte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Schulte, of Arlington, Va., was married late yesterday afternoon to Frank Baker Burdsall, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker Burdsall, of Washington. The Rev. Henry J. Miller officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a period dress of white moire with a bouffant skirt and long sleeves ending in points over the hands. Her fingertip length veil of tulle, in three tiers, was trimmed with net ruching and attached to a coronet of orange blosoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and white roses.

Miss Elizabeth Daniels, of Alexandria, was maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a peacock blue period frock of taffeta with a matching poke bonnet, and carried a colonial bouquet of roses.

Ogden Burdsall, of Washington, was best man, and ushers were Rowland W. Schulte and Paul G. Ochman.

Following the ceremony there was a reception in the Rhodes room of the church, which was decorated with dahlias and palms. Mrs. Schulte wore a Teal blue dress with Dubonnet accessories and Mrs. Burdsall, mother of the bridegroom, wore black and sapphire blue crepe with black accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Burdsall left later by motor for a wedding trip through the South, the bride wearing a two-piece wool suit trimmed in Leopard, a hat to match and brown accessories. A corsage of orchids completed her costume. On their return the couple will live at 2010 Kalorama road.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Oscar Ogden, Miss Mary F. Ogden and Mr. and Mrs. Ira W. Burdsall, all of Wenonah, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Schulte with their daughter, Miss Bettylee Schulte, of Baltimore.

Mrs. Burdsall is a graduate of Strayer's Commercial College and Mr. Bursdall of Benjamin Franklin University.

Cabinet Hostesses Get Ready for Social Season

None Are Immune to Housekeeping Demands
Several Are Busy Putting Homes in Order
Mrs. Hull Returns From Atlantic City

Not even Cabinet hostesses are immune to the demands of housekeeping, it seems, and at the end of the between-season lull several have been busy putting their houses in order for the coming winter's social siege.

Some have announced that they are "being very quiet" until fall housecleaning is over, and others have averred that plans for entertaining must wait a while.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, having only recently returned from a 10-day stay in Atlantic City, has outlined no schedule for entertaining as yet. She, like the other Cabinet hostesses, will wait until the White House calendar for the season is announced before they decide on dates for their parties.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., came to Washington Thursday for just a day and is now back at the Morgenthau farm at Hopewell Junction, where the Secretary probably will spend the week-end.

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, who with her husband recently abandoned plans for a trip to California, has made use of her spare time in the past few days by putting things in order before her children return from Massachusetts. When she and the Secretary first decided to go to the West Coast, they left their children at the home of her parents, former Senator and Mrs. Marcus A. Coolidge. And when the trip was canceled due to the international situation, it seemed just the right time to get her house in order while the youngsters were still away.

In a few days, however, Mrs. Woodring will be off to Fitchburg, Mass., for a brief visit with her parents, and when she returns she will have Marcus, Melissa and baby Cooper Coolidge in tow.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, who, with the Attorney General, has been visiting in Connecticut and New York, returned last evening. Mr. Cummings was back a few days earlier.

Mrs. James A. Farley, whose trips to Washington seem to grow less and less frequent, now is with her children in New York. The Postmaster General, however, is on another speaking trip. Yesterday he appeared before the National Association of Postmasters in St. Paul, Minn., and today he will address the Chamber of Commerce in Salina, Kans. He is expected to return to New York on Tuesday.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who, with the Secretary of the Navy, returned from Camp Rapidan some time ago, has made no plans for winter entertaining. The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes will not be officially "at home" to anyone until after October 1.

Another who is not yet officially "at home," although she returned to Washington several days ago, is Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. House cleaning is now at a high pitch around the Wallace apartment, and the lady of the house would like to get everything straight before she plunges into the whirl of calling and receiving.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, has just returned from Gibson, N. C., where she was called suddenly last week because of the death of her uncle, Harris Gibson, the last member of a large and well-known family there. She and the Secretary have no plans for official entertainment in the near future, though over the week-end they are taking several informal groups of friends down the river in the Department of Commerce boat, The Navigator, to view the President's Cup Regatta.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins finds the pressure of business very great at the present moment and has no official entertaining planned.

Minister Cudahy Back in Capital

The United States Minister to Ireland, John Cudahy, arrived in Washington yesterday from his home in Milwaukee and will be at the Mayflower for about a week. He will remain in this country until next spring.

Mr. Cudahy is the uncle of Mrs. Harold Ickes, who visited him at our legation in Dublin before her marriage in that city last spring to the Secretary of the Interior.

Rep. Lesinski, Bride Motoring to Florida

Representative and Mrs. John Lesinski, of Dearborn, Mich., spent several days in Washington this week at the Mayflower, leaving yesterday on a motor trip to Florida.

Mrs. Lesinski is the former Miss Estelle Geisinger. Their marriage took place in Virginia within a day or two of the adjournment of Congress.

Notes of Society

Mrs. Roosevelt is visiting her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parish, at their home at Llewellyn Park, Orange, N. J. She will return to Washington on Monday.

Former Senator and Mrs. Nathanial B. Dial and their son, Joseph, have left for a stay of ten days in South Carolina.

Takeo Ozawa, Attache of the Japanese embassy, left yesterday for Seattle, where he will embark for Japan. He has been ordered back to the Foreign Office in Tokyo.

Mrs. Moulton K. Johnson and her daughter, Miss Belle Johnson, are at the Croydon Hotel in New York. They are en route to Washington from Jamestown, R. I., where they spent the summer.

Mrs. David Bornet and her daughter, Miss Barbara Bornet, returned to Washington yesterday after spending the summer in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Eichberg have taken an apartment at 4700 Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. William M. Guthrie, Miss Ann Guthrie and Miss Emilie Jones, of Washington, have joined Mr. and Mrs. F. Henry Jones of this city at the St. Regis hotel in New York.

Judge Annabel Matthews has returned to her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel after a visit in Gainesville, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Reiss, of Sacramento, Calif., are at the Dodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Ogden have arrived at the Shoreham after a tour of the South. They will leave for New York in several days and will visit there a week before returning to their home in San Diego, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Edmondson, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Millett at the Ivanhoe Apartments, are now in Baltimore, where they will be with friends before returning to their home in Chicago.

Mrs. James Waring and her daughter, Miss Ruth Waring, who will enter Mount Vernon Seminary, are at the Shoreham. Mrs. Waring will visit Williamsburg before returning to her home in Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Jones, of Kansas City, Mo., are at the Wardman Park for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney H. Birdseye, of 4700 Connecticut avenue, are at the Hotel Commodore in New York.

Mrs. S. D. Murphy, of Indianapolis, Ind., is visiting Miss Ida Shirk at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff will arrive in New York on Monday on the Europa, after a vacation in Germany.

University Women To Open Hike Season

First Outing Is Planned for October 2
Trips Often Led by Noted Naturalists
16 Walks Are Scheduled for Each Year

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A veteran group among the hikers' organizations of the District is that of the American Association of University Women, which will start its season on October 2. For 25 years the members have been making trips to all "walkable" places in the city and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Miss Margaret A. McMahon, who is still the leading spirit of the group, was among those who joined when it was founded by Miss Anne Pierce, now a resident of New York. Others who have been active in it from the beginning are Dr. Anna Ketchum, Miss Harriet Cheney, Miss Meta Aussieker, Miss Nettie C. Peterson and Miss Joy Webster.

There are few places hereabout with which the hikers are not familiar. Their trips have included more than exercise, for they have often had as leaders naturalists, ornithologists, horticulturists and others whose knowledge of the locality made each excursion a lesson in nature study.

There are 16 walks and picnics a year. Often the outing is held in the vicinity of the country home of a member and supper is served there afterward. This is the plan for the first hike of the season.

Long Trips Among Season's Outings

Among the places visited in previous trips have been Rock Creek Park, Fort Dupont, Black Pond, Difficult Run, Great Falls, Gettysburg, and the Skyline Drive. Sometimes the members join the Sunday trips arranged weekly by the National Park Service. They go in cars to distant places and then hike over the territory.

G. A. Gambs frequently leads the hikers. Dr. Paul Bartsch, of George Washington University, and Herbert Cornell are others who have served as leaders in past seasons. The late Leo. D. Miner and the late Prof. W. W. Cook, former ornothologist of the Biological Survey, also were among those who often led the walks.

Miss Pierce, the founder, was associated with Dr. Harvey W. Wiley in his work, and he and Mrs. Wiley were frequently members of the hiking party. Mrs. Karl Fenning is an active member of the group and her husband on occasions joins the party as does Albert Caffee, whose wife is a member.

Miss Stone Often Leads Members

Miss Ella L. Stone, who has served as leader on many of the excursions, still is one of the enthusiastic members of the hikers' group. Miss Elizabeth Smith of the Civil Service, Miss Verna Brungart, a Government attorney, and Miss McMahon now plan most of the walks.

The outings are scheduled and announced a month in advance in the club bulletin. An average of 25 goes on each trip but there have been as many as 45 and as few as three on some of the hikes in seasons past.

Among those who are now active members of the group are: Miss Angela Williams, Miss A. K. Sanders, Mrs. Thomas Heitz, Mrs. Jane Hodgkins, Miss Julia Escher, Miss Floy E. Wallis, Miss Laura Pollock, Miss Sara Abbott. Miss Margaret Vail, whose cottage in Sherwood has been an objective for serveral of the outings; Miss Barbara McMullen, Miss Carrie Davis, Miss Cora L. Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess

The Wary Ones.

The wary person always tries
To ne'er be taken by surprise.
—Old Mother Nature.

The first loss had occurred in the family of the Black Ducks, who had been staying in the big slough where Jerry Muskrat and Mrs. Jerry had made their new home. It was very sad. A hunter with a terrible gun had visited the slough and of the seven young Ducks who had been hiding in the rushes there were now but six with their parents out on the middle of the Big River, where they were safe from terrible guns. The one called the Laggard, because all his short life he had the bad habit of always being a little bit late, a little bit behind, had lagged once too often. He had been a little late in taking to the air when the others did and at the crack of the terrible gun he had dropped back among the rushes never to fly or swim again. Yes indeed, it was very sad.

Now Mr. and Mrs. Black Duck are among the most wary of the feathered folk. You know wary people are those who are suspicious of danger and therefore always watchful. It is seldom that they are taken by surprise. They are not content to guess that things are all right; they must know if they are.

The six young Ducks, now as big as their parents but as yet with little experience in the Great World, were terribly frightened and they didn't understand at all what had happened. They had heard the crack of the gun and glancing back some of them had seen their brother fall back among the rushes. It was the more dreadful because they didn't understand it. Now as they gathered aronud their parents out on the Big River their mother tried to explain.

"This is the most dangerous time of all the year for Ducks," said she. "It is at this time time that two-legged folk hunt us, and they use fire sticks which kill or hurt those they are pointed at when even some distance away." Of course she meant guns.

"So these hunters are more to be feared than all other hunters together," spoke up their father. "They are our worst enemies. They are the only ones who hunt us in unfair ways."

Mrs. Duck nodded. "That is true," said she. "At this season of the year I would not trust one of those two-legged folk sa far as I could see him."

"Are we safe out here?" asked one of the youngsters somewhat anxiously.

"Quite safe," replied Mother Duck.

"We are right in plain sight. We can't hide here," said another youngster.

"We don't need to hide," replied Father Duck. "We are so far from shore that even the dreadful fire sticks cannot reach us, and no one can creep up on us."

"Will we have to stay out here?" a third wanted to know.

"Until dark," replied his mother. "Then it will be safe to go back where we were; these hunters with fire sticks do not hunt then. If they did it wouldnt be safe to go back there at all and we would have to move on. As it is from now on we will have to spend our days out here on the open water and do our feeding after the Black Shadows have made the feeding places safe. Remember, all of you, that at this time of year it never is safe to return to a feeding place in daytime once that place has been visited by one of these two-legged hunters. He is likely to remain there all day long."

So all the remainedr of that day the Black Duck family remained out in the middle of the Big River. Over in the bulrushes in the big slough the hunter hid and waited in vain for their return. Once he saw Crowbill the Coot and was tempted to shoot, but he knew that the sound of the gun would carry far and warn the Ducks to stay away. So he didnt shoot. He remained until after dark then started home.

"Probably those Ducks had just stopped over for a day and that one shot of mine sent them on their way," thought he.

Before he reached home Mr. and Mrs. Black Duck and the six young Ducks were being welcomed back to the big slough by Jerry Muskrat.

THE NEWSPAPER WOMEN'S CLUB this afternoon will have the first "open house" of a series it is planning for Saturdays during the season at the clubrooms at at the Admiral Hotel. It is not a party—just an opportunity for members to drop in for a cup of tea, play cards and indulge in friendly gossip or talk shop, as inclination dictates.

The first business meeting of the club will be held Monday night at 8 o'clock for the discussion of program plans. A tea in honor of the new Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, and Mrs. Brennan, has been announced for the afternoon of October 5. Mr. Brennan, former newspaper editor and owner, will give a short talk on "Newspapers in Ireland."

MISS MARY VACCARO will entertain the Junior Group of the American Association of University Women at her home, 3227 North Hampton street, tonight at an old-fashioned box supper. The girls will arrive with escorts and take box lunches which will be auctioned in country style. Games and entertainment are planned for the rest of the evening.

ALL members of the local Junior Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society are working to raise the amount of their $10 tickets for the donor dinner dance they are sponsoring at the Raleigh Hotel October 30. Girls who get five new members for the organization are credited with their tickets. One group raised money with a small dance last May. Some of the members are selling cosmetics and some have devised other means of making money for support of the project. The donor dinner dance will be principal source of the $2,000 the juniors plan to raise by the end of the year for the home at Denver.

A $5 prize awarded at their fashion show last week-end was won by Miss Ruth Glasser. She already had $8 toward her ticket, so she kept only $2 and gave the balance to one of the girls who had not yet started to raise hers.

SAMLA TEMPLE, Daughters of the Nile, is planning a card party to be given September 30 at the home of Mrs. Elma Jenkins, 6811 Second street northwest. Mrs. Billie Langley is chairman.

Mrs. Jenkins, who is queen of the temple, has appointed as committees for the coming year: Hospital, Laurel Bedell, Lila White; ways and means, Geneva Dolan and Bessie Brengle; social, Lena Beatty and Helen Luckett; sunshine, Marion Rue and Kathleen Broome; hospitality, Marion Lee and Edna Janes; publicity, Maud H. Shelton.

The supreme queen's banquet will be held October 29.

THE ALTRUSA CLUB, of which Mrs. Lucille McMurry is president, will be entertained at a buffet supper Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist

Moose Women Hear Talk on Publicity

Miss Vella A. Winner, editor of the G.F.W.C. Magazine and director of publicity for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke last night at a meeting of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose. Mrs. Wade H. Mitchell, chairman of publicity for the chapter, was in charge of the program, and also presented Miss Inez Killey, editor of the national order's monthly, Digest, and Mrs. Anna Gilbert, editor of the chapter's Bulletin.

Miss Winner, author of "What Makes You Thing So?" a boook on woman's club publicity, to be issued next month, declared that "the greatest service organized woman can do their communities, their States and the Nation, is to create and direct an enlightened public opinion."

"In a democracy such as ours," she said, "the success of the whole American scheme of things depends upon active, mobilized public opinion. Public opinion is your opinion, your thought, your judgment, your decision, made national. How do you arrive at your judgments? On what do you base your decisions? What makes you think so? The answer is publicity.

She defined news as current, truth truthful and interesting information from the standpoint of one who wishes to be informed, and publicity as the same from the standpoint of one who wishes others to be informed.

"There is one royal road to real publicity, and that is in building programs that are alive and challenging," she told her audience. An organization may have the best publicity chairman in the world and yet, if its program is the usual routine, conventional one, it need not be surprised if the news columns are closed to it. An organization whose program is in tune with the problems of the day, and which has courage to attack them in more than an academic fashion, will not have to knock at the doors of the press to get publicity.

"Notices for publication which come to the desk of a club editor are merciless in divulging what type of organization and leadership is behind them. It isn't quantity of space that matters, but quality of activity that proclaims our worth."

Following Miss Winner's talk, Mrs. Isaac Smith Lankford, of the Arlington (Va.) chapter, presented a group of vocal solos, accompanied by Mrs. Charles Henry Benkert.

Publicity chairmen from the chapters at Annapolis and Baltimore, and the grand recorder of the order, Miss Katherine Smith, were among guests at the meeting.

Vionnet Disregards Low Waistline Trend

Paris, (U.P.).—Madeleine Vionnet, oft-called "queen of couturieres," displays her usual disregard for the rest of the fashion dictators by ignoring the general tendency toward "period" dresses, plaids, stripes, lower waistlines and all the rest of the things forecast for fall.

Her collection is outstanding in its use of a wide, loose sleeve—often elbow length—set in low on the shoulder with more or less fullness; in its almost exclusive use of violet or purplish red shades for wool or silk daytime clothes; white wool materials for winter; and a very high-waisted Empire line for evening gowns

Hopkins Set To Direct Aid In Storm Area

WPA Chief Flying Here
Davis Asks Donations
6 Governors to Meet

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, yesterday prepared to assume direction of relief activities in the New England storm area on behalf of President Roosevelt.

Hopkins was enroute here by plane from Los Angeles to discuss the problem with the President before flying to Boston for a conference Monday with the Governors of the six affected States.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, meanwhile issued an appeal for an emergency relief fund of at least $500,000 to care for the storm and flood sufferers.

Governors to Confer

Aubrey Williams, acting works progress administrator, invited the Governors of New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont to attend the conference with Hopkins. The Governors, it is expected, will be accompanied by one or two experts on highway engineering and flood control.

Others invited include officials of the Red Cross in the storm region and of the Corps of Army Engineers supervising flood control work. R. C. Brandon, WPA field representative in charge of the area, and State WPA administrators also will participate.

Roosevelt, still confined by a cold, called in Senator Theodore F. Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, yesterday, to assure him that the Government would do everything possible to aid the storm victims.

"I gave the President the latest information on the havoc caused by the storm and tidal wave," Green said.

Homes Washed Away

"The damage seems unbelievable. I am informed all Government agencies, including the Coast Guard, Navy, Works Progress Administration and Civilian Conservation Corps have done splendid work aiding our people."

Green said repair of storm damage would be a "tremendous problem" since the wind and high water not only had destroyed houses but had washed away the ground on which they stood.

Davis said a large fund would be needed to care for the 40,000 or 50,000 people in distress and also to aid in the task of repairing and rebuilding homes.

"Reports from our relief workers, who have completed their first surveys in the stricken areas," he said, "indicate that a minimum of $500,000 will be required for Red Cross relief.

"Our chapters have sheltered thousands of people, and are feeding and otherwise aiding flood refugees in six States.

"The Red Cross is sending food by truckloads into many points cut off from normal transportation facilities, and is prepared to send nursing help should bad situations develop. At the present time, 100 relief workers are aiding local Red Cross chapters at all affected points."

Davis announced that the national organization had contributed $25,000 from its treasury to the disaster fund.

Corrington Gill, Assistant Works Progress Administrator, left here by plane yesterday afternoon to direct an aerial survey of storm and flood damage. Maj. B. M. Harloe, acting chief of WPA engineers, will join him.

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation announced that its food trucks had delivered evaporated milk, flour and butter to Norwich, Conn., and Fitchburg, Holyoke, Springfield and Ware, Mass.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority relaxed its regulations restricting the flying time of pilots. About 100 pilots living near Newark, N. J., the commission said, have volunteered for emergency flights to the storm zone.

10,000 Miles Cleared

Williams said last night that more than 10,000 miles of primary and secondary roads in Rhode Island had been cleared sufficiently to permit passage of trucks and automobiles and that similar work was being pushed in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

"By midday today," he said, "we hope to establish contact with all major points in the stricken area."

WPA workers, Williams said, have recovered more than 150 bodies from wrecked buildings and swollen streams.

Lighthouse Bureau Reports 5 Lives Lost in Storm

The Bureau of Lighthouses of the Commerce Department yesterday reported a loss of five lives in the northeastern storm and property amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Three of those reported dead were members of families of lighthouse keepers.

Commissioner Harold D. King said the outstanding loss was the destruction of the Whale Back light station in Narragansett Bay—a 71-foot station erected in 1882. Two keepers required to remain at the station at all times presumably were drowned. Keeper Walter B. Eberle was reported among the dead.

The lighthouse tender Tulip, a 1,050-ton ship, was driven ashore at New London, Conn., with such force against the main line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Commissioner Frank T. Bell of the Bureau of Fisheries, said the storm damage at the laboratory and fish hatchery at Wood's Hole amounted to about $50,000. The extent of the damage at the bureau's station at Gloucester, Mass., remains unknown.

Ickes Approves Boost In Va. School Grant

Atlanta, Sept. 23 (AP).—Administrator Harold L. Ickes today approved an amended PWA application made by Williamsburg, Va., for an elementary school for colored to cost $210,000. The school, with 16 classrooms, auditorium and stage, will accommodate 750 pupils. Ickes granted $94,500 for construction.

Washingtonians in Storm Area Safe and telephone lines were strewn around."

The Paradise home escaped damage, Murley said, because an adjoining apartment house building broke the force of the storm.

"The storm lasted about an hour and a half," he declared. "I have been in hurricanes in the tropics, but I think this was the most severe I ever experienced.

"Trees toppled over and buried in houses and garages. The air was filled with flying shutters, limbs, paper—debris of all descriptions. Plate glass windows virtually exploded."

Travel Only by Foot

Mrs. Marley said that, in Springfield after the storm, it was possible to travel only by foot, and even then at the rate of only three-quarters of a mile in two hours owing to the debris that cluttered the streets and sidewalks. Within three or four blocks around her parents' home, she said, half a dozen houses had been destroyed by trees that had toppled on them.

Murley is with the Civil Service Commission.

A number of Washingtonians yesterday still had not heard from relatives or friends in the stricken area, although in some cases meager messages had been received giving assurance of safety.

The body of Mrs. Mae C. Schlater, 2700 Q street northwest, was identified by friends, although Charles W. Schlater, her husband, still was missing. The Schlaters had been spending a few weeks at the home of Myron Schlater, New York, a broker and brother of Charles, at Westhampton, Long Island.

Mrs. L. A. Rogers, 3635 S street northwest, said last night that she had received no word from Mrs. Georges Eckels, 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest, who was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Robert James Malone, at St. James, Long Island, at the time of the storm.

No Word Received

Likewise, no word has been received from Mrs. William B. Halliday, who has been staying at her summer home at Osterville, Mass., on Cape Cod.

Mrs. Rogers was advised that Dr. and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, 1736 M street northwest, who have a summer home in Woods Hole, Mass., were safe, but that the house in which they were staying was flooded.

J. B. Aiken, 909 Quackenbos street northwest, yesterday received word that his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Don M. Garber, 4833 Forty-sixth street northwest, who plan to spend the winter at Lantern Hill Camp at Old Mystic, Conn., were safe. With them, and also safe, were the Rev. and Mrs. I. F. Wagner, of Bradenton, Fla., parents of Mrs. C. R Moore, 3707 Reservoir road.

Miss Evelyn Sawyer, 3131 Eleventh street northwest, said that she had been unable to get any word concerning her grandfather and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellison, at Eastham, on Cape Cod, or Clara Tucker, a cousin, also in Eastham.

Mrs. Ruth McLeish, 2724 Eleventh street northwest, last night had been unable to communicate with her two brothers, Harold and William Morgan, and her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mason, and their daughter, Betty, all at Sagaponack, Long Island.

Escape in Auto

R. E. Wells, 1334 Vermont avenue, reported that he had heard nothing from his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cummings, Peterboro, N. H., and their two children.

Mrs. William H. Aldrich, 1046 Irving street northwest, said she had been informed that her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Sweeney, Springfield, Mass., who were out on Cape Cod when the storm broke, now are safe in Worcester, Mass. They still are unable to get back to Springfield, she said, because the roads have been washed out.

Mrs. Aldrich said the Sweeneys climbed out the rear window of the cottage in which they were staying and escaped from the high water by automobile.

Miss Gretchen West, 2026 F street northwest, had heard nothing last night from her mother and sister, who have been staying at her mother's cottage at Martha's Vineyard, Mass. Her sister, Miss Janet West, is employed in the Works Progress Administration.

Ledley A. Wallace, 3710 Bangor street southeast, was informed that his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Harris, and their son, were safe at their home at Astoria, Long Island. The Harrises are former Washingtonians.

the retarded rise, as judged by the past destructive antics of the big river in 1936 and 1927, indicated the crest was near and that the river would hold at its top level three hours or so before receding.

In Rhode Island were centered the greatest horrors of the hurricane's aftermath. Revised figures put the dead in that State at above 225, and Gov. Quinn, after surveying the destruction, appealed directly to President Roosevelt for Federal aid.

The Works Progress Administration immediately detached 5,000 workers for rescue duty.

100,000 WPA Workers Aid

Whole settlements were smashed; some families had not a single survivor. The great gale, which was disclosed to have reached 120 miles an hour, crushed the heavy sea wall at Narragansett Pier.

National Guardsmen moved into two settlements to stop looting. Providence, the capital city, had a 5 p. m. (Eastern daylight time) curfew, and like Woonsocket and Westerly, was under martial law.

All along 12 miles of shoreline between Watch Hill and Charlestown Beach fatalities were high.

Over the whole storm area, 100,000 WPA workers and many thousands of troops, Red Cross men and women, and volunteers were offering help to the helpless, attempting to facilitate transportation of food supplies, helding to restore communications, and standing guard duty.

In Massachusetts, where the dead numbered more than 100, Army bedding for refugees arrived in Springfield, which had been protected by dikes from the Connecticut River. Looting of summer cottages on Cape Cod was reported.

50 Dead in New York

In New Jersey, while serious flood conditions were averted, there was heavy damage to bungalow colonies along the Passaic River and its tributaries. Fifteen towns on the North Jersey shore reported total damage of $1,000,000.

Weary men and women, saddened by the devastating effects of the hurricane, searched the wreckage of Long Island's coastal towns yesterday for missing victims of the blow, as latest estimates placed the damage well above $5,000,000.

The known dead were numbered at 48, and 40 persons were missing, either washed out to sea Wednesday or buried under houses along the 100-mile stretch of coast. Two of the missing were reported from the fishing village of Montauk, at the extreme eastern tip of the island, where 40 houses were destroyed and 60 so badly battered they were uninhabitable.

Rail Service Disrupted

Westhampton's loss alone was estimated at $1,000,000, Southampton's at $400,000 and East Hampton's at $250,000, while Fire Island counted nearly 600 wrecked houses, Islip damage of $500,000, and Ocean Beach a loss of 300 houses. Uncounted numbers of boats of all descriptions and automobiles were wrecked or badly damaged.

Railroad service out of New York through the stricken areas was still below normal and in places was halted considerably.

Westchester County and The Bronx were engaged in the giant task of rehabilitating communities where wind and rain ripped up trees, impaired highways and damaged communication lines. Westchester alone estimated losses at about $1,000,000.

The Hudson and other rivers which had threatened serious overflows crested without great damage, although many river families in southern New York had to move out of their homes.

Vermont, like New Hampshire, was all but lost in the silence of broken communications. Much of the State was without power or light.

U. S. Ships Supplies

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation shipped supplies to New Haven, Conn., and Providence, and State and local agencies sent other food and medical supplies to flooded and wind-torn areas.

Restoration of communications with New Hampshire centers revealed stories of deaths, submerged homes, and closed plants, but there the loss of life was not as heavy as in the southern parts of New England. A complete survey of the State reduced the estimated list of dead from 13 to 10.

Reports from Nashua, N. H., said the Merrimack floodwaters forced the closing of all plants in that city for lack of power. Thirty-five families were evacuated as the river flooded four streets. There were no trains to the north or south of Nashua, but bus service finally was established to Boston and to Concord, N. H.

Thousands of Trees Felled

The silence of northern Vermont partially was broken for the first time since Wednesday night, when Ralph Morse, sports editor of the St. Johnsbury Caledonian, flew 180 miles to Boston to pick up a news report at the Boston bureau of the Associated Press.

Morse said the wind felled thousands of trees in Vermont, tore down telephone lines and damaged homes. He said a catastrophe was averted at Montpelier when a tree fell on a theater just after most of the patrons had gone home because the lights went out.

The tree crashed through the roof and fell on the orchestra seats.

Further news of destruction at Vineyard Haven came from State police, who said 40 cottages had been destroyed there. The homes belonged mostly to fishermen who lost their boats in the storm.

The storm blew down large stands of valuable white pine in northwestern Massachusetts and estimates of lumber losses were placed at $2,000,000 in three towns alone. The wind made kindling of a stand of 40-year trees, containing 1,500,000 feet of lumber.

CHAT WITH A DICTATOR.

(Strictly undiplomatic revelation of the Capital of what occurred when Neville Chamberlain went to take tea with Adolf Hitler; somewhat imaginary.)

ADOLF: Sit down. Do you want to fight?

NEVILLE: Really, now, this is unprec——

ADOLF: Then give us Czechoslovakia. I can lick my weight in wildcats.

• • • •

NEVILLE: Couldn't we have some pourparlers first to——

ADOLF: Haven't you read my book? All in black and white. The minimum.

NEVILLE: But Britannia rules the——

• • • •

ADOLF: And we rule the land and air. That's our story.

NEVILLE: Have you really got so many——

ADOLF: Millions of 'em. Five hundred miles an hour. Soldiers nine feet tall. Shoot 100 miles.

"—he negotiates for Britain"

NEVILLE: Could I have a cup of——

HITLER: Certainly. Nice pair of pants you're wearing.

NEVILLE: Do you really like them? You're welcome to them. (He begins to take them off. This is the first sentence he has had a chance to finish.)

• • • •

ADOLF: Now you're talking sense. You beef-eaters! I never eat meat. See how steady my arm is? (He holds it out.)

NEVILLE: We'd like to have you sign some——

ADOLF: Treaties? Any number of them! (Contemptuously) What's a treaty? A letter to Santa Claus. Do we get Czechoslovakia?

NEVILLE: Will you promise not to—

ADOLF: Bomb London? Certainly—for the present. Maybe bomb you later. If I have a vision. Gut? Do we get Czechoslovakia?

"—pooh! Treaties? Certainly!"

NEVILLE: But we have treaties with——

ADOLF: Treaties? I show you what we do with treaties. (He rings.) Ribbentrop, bring me in a couple of treaties. Any treaties.

NEVILLE: But you can't——

• • • •

ADOLF: Like this—(he tears one treaty in four pieces) we take care of treaties. Some we tear this way. (He tears the other one catercorner, throws the scraps in a waste basket.)

NEVILLE: (Greatly enlightened.) So that's the way——

ADOLF: Yes. Try it some time. How are your colonies? We get around to those later . . . That's a nice shirt you're wearing——

• • • •

NEVILLE: (With resignation.) Very well, you can have it. (He takes the shirt off.) But may I keep my starched collar? It helps keep my chin up.

ADOLF: Sure, keep it. Keep your chin up just so. Like my boy Schmeling. Lead with your chin. Look at the goose-pimples all over you! My dear friend, what are you afraid of?

NEVILLE: And now I have that blarsted airplane trip home ahead of me.

Warring Tax Case Decision Delayed

Justice Bolitha J. Laws reserved decision yesterday on a motion filed in District Court by the three Warring brothers to require the Government to submit a bill of particulars of the indictment charging them with criminal conspiracy to evade income tax payments.

Charles Warring, 30, is in Atlanta penitentiary for complicity in the shooting of George O'Brien, who was a witness in a case involving gangsters here. Indicted with Charles were Emmett Warring, 32; Leo Warring, 43; Gordon L. Sadur, a tax accounting expert, and Henry L. Sherr, an employe of Sadur's.

Assistant District Attorney John J. Wilson opposed the Warring motion, contending the indictment was sufficient as it stood.

9 Hospitals, Relief Unit Quit Chest

2 Agencies Added Membership Now 56 Trustees Meet Committees Report

Nine hospitals and the Southern Relief Society will leave the Community Chest in 1939, while two new agencies will join, bringing the number of member organizations to 56, the executive committee of the Chest, reported yesterday at a trustees' meetng.

The new agencies to enter the group are the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing and the department of social welfare of the Washington Federation of Churches. It was explained the hospitals and the relief society did not apply for membership next year after agreement had been reached on plans to care for their cases.

Before the Chest's budget committee, Charles H. Dodd and Maj. Gilbert S. Decker, of the Salvation Army, told of needy men turned away for lack of funds and asked for an increase in the army's budget of $26,670. This increase, they said, would be used to care for transient men, for the salary of an additional case worker and for other purposes.

Hospitalization Fund

Even though the nine hospitals dropped out of the chest, hospitalization of those who can afford to pay only a part or none of their bill will be cared for through a hospitalization fund set up by the chest budget committee, it was explained before the trustees. Also, contributors who wish to specify hospital care for needy sick may do so when their pledges are signed, it was pointed out.

Those who need financial help for hospital care and are not eligible to enter tax-supported institutions will be sent to private hospitals of their choice through the Health Security Administration. This body formerly was the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals.

William J. Flather, jr., chest campaign chairman, reported to the trustees that organization of the volunteer campaign army is ahead of schedule. Coleman Jennings, president of the chest, reported for the executive committee.

Other committee chairmen reporting were J. S. Gorrell, budget; Charles B. Dulcan, sr., publicity; and Dr. M. C. Merrill of the Department of Agriculture, headquarters. A treasurer's report was made by H. L. Rust, jr.

New Chest Setup

4 Students Hurt, U. of M. Class Forbids Hazing

Sophomore Class President Frank Davis yesterday forbade hazing of freshmen at the University of Maryland but declared the yearlings must "not get the idea that they are not to obey all rat rules listed in the 'M' book."

The sophomore president's decision was the result of a pep meeting last Tuesday when four students were slightly injured while freshmen were being led up to Dorm B to "pray for rain."

The four students, including one sophomore, fell into a pit.

Md. Biologists Offer Cash For Bottles Found in Bay

Solomons, Md., Sept. 23, (AP).—If on a Sunday afternoon you decide to take the family yacht down Chesapeake Bay for a spin, don't swear at the bottles floating about—pick them up and perhaps win the price of a tankful of gasoline.

The Chesapeake Biological Laboratory will dump 1,500 of them into the bay starting tomorrow from the Virginia Capes to the mouth of the Susquehanna River. Five hundred others were dumped between the Patuxent River and the Capes starting last Monday.

The bottles are expected to determine the rate and flow of tides and currents. The flow of bottles is also expected to aid in determining the movement of marine life, and the cause for shortage or abundance of crabs, fish and oyester.

As for that extra gas money—be on the lookout especially for bottles numbered 14, 411, 981, 1493 and 1979. Those numbers contain promises to pay from $5 up.

No time limit has been set for turning the bottles in.

15,000 on Pennsylvania Avenue Watch the President's Cup Parade; Regatta Queen Draws Cheers, Lifeguards in Shorts Fetch Laughs

March Takes ½ Hour 300 Special Police Services Take Part

The President's Cup Regatta took to terra firma last night, commandeering America's most historic mile for a parade which entertained 15,000 spectators lining Pennsylvania avenue from the Peace Monument to Fifteenth street northwest.

The column of 1,200 marchers, interspersed with bands and floats, took more than half an hour to pass the reviewing stand at Postoffice Triangle.

Miss Elizabeth Reed, queen of the regatta, and the equally attractive ladies of her court won a gay response all along the avenue, while three Red Cross life guards, exposed to the autumn evening in bathing trunks, ran a gauntlet of jests the length of the Federal Triangle. But the light-hearted crowd, apparently reminded of news from overseas, was momentarily hushed as four anti-aircraft guns and two light field guns rolled past behind colors of the 260th Coast Artillery.

The armed services were well represented in the parade formations, which included detachments from the Navy Yard and destroyer Jacob Jones, 121st Engineers, District National Guard; Fifth Battalion, organized Marine Reserves, and headquarters and special troops under command of Maj. William T. Roy. The military escort was led by Col. John W. Oehman, grand marshal of the parade, with his staff, followed by drum and bugle corps of Fort Stevens Post, American Legion.

Other units in the line of march were a detail from the United States Coast Guard; Capitol Forest, Tall Cedars of Lebanon Band; Elks' Boys Band, three Job's Daughters drill teams, a Sea Scout troop, employes' bands of the Washington Gas Light Co. and Chestnut Farms Dairy, and several commercial floats.

Preceded up the avenue by the report of rockets and strains of martial music, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and a squad of motorcyle police headed the parade. Next in line was a float carrying James A. Councilor, general chairman of the regatta, and other officials.

More than 300 police were assigned to special duty on the parade route and intersecting streets.

The Queen of the Regatta, Miss Elizabeth Reed, and ladies of her court as they appeared on the tinsel decorated float that was cheered by crowds who lined Pennsylvania avenue last night

Capital Women Take Honors in Va. Bridge Match

The master point bridge tournament for the contract championships of Northern Virginia began yesterday in the George Mason Hotel, in Alexandria. An event for women's pairs acted as a curtain raiser in the afternoon. It attracted the largest field in any women's game held in this part of the country. The Baltimore delegation numbered fifteen players, while Hagerstown, Md., had a four-table representation.

Mrs. B. Robins and Mrs. Dixie T. Wright, both of this city, captured the championship, defeating Mrs. C. L. Wiley and Mrs. F. A. Colonell, of Baltimore, by half a match point. The remaining honor position went to members of the Washington Bridge League; Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter and Mrs. James H. Lemon finished third, Mrs. P. E. Henninger and Mrs. C. Murray Hall, fourth, and Mrs. H. C. White and Mrs. A. P. Stockvis, fifth. The winners receive custody of the trophy and a national master point award.

The mixed pair event was held last night. A scrambled Mitchell movement was used in order to secure the fairest competition. Fifty-four pairs enrolled in the game. While the majority of players came from Washington, bridge luminaries from at least five states were in the field. Scores for this event will not be completed until noon today. The tournament ends Sunday evening.

Former Senate page and now an employ in the Senate cloakroom, Phil was graduated from Columbus University in June, took the bar test and passed on his first try. His classmates who passed will be admitted to practice law October 11 in the District Court and United States Court of Appeals.

Civic Group Criticizes Police Trial Board

5 Members Asked President's Aid Sought Health Programs Cited

Expressing dissatisfaction with the Police Trial Board as now constituted, the Federation of Civic Associations last night, at a meeting held in the board room at the District Building, made recommendation to the Commissioners that a board of five members be appointed, one of whom shall be selected from the group of organized colored citizens.

A report of the legislative committee on propositions for development of the battalion of the 372nd Infantry, D. C. N. G., to full strength was approved and the committee directed to present the entire matter to the President of the United States, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, together with the federation plan for relief.

The federation directed its constituent organizations to rally in support of health programs and activities throughout the city, and deplored that health statistics and mortality rates were being used extensively as a blanket measure to deprive colored citizens of employment.

Emphasis on the Kingman Lake area and the Anacostia River, within and beyond the District of Columbia, as the place for immediate attention in programs for decrease of pollution of streams, was urged by the federation as the most important project of the kind in contemplation.

A branch public library, to be located on Fairmont street, between Sherman and Georgia avenues, was favored by the organization. The legislative committee was directed to ask of Congress representation of colored citizens on the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Silent tribute was paid the late Walter A. Pinchback, former president of the Bloomingdale Civic Association, and head of the federation suffrage committee.

Mother, 3 Sons, Overcome by Gas From Heater

A defective hot water gas heater last night sent four members of one family to Sibley Hospital. A fifth was given first aid at the home by an Emergency Hospital ambulance doctor.

Recovering from effects of the fumes are Mrs. Henrietta Gingrich, 32; her three sons, Clyde, 13, James, 11, and Bert, 10; and her sister, Josephine Yoch, 21, all of 32 Seaton place northwest. They were found in a stupor, induced by the fumes, by Mrs. Elizabeth Yoch, who called police. Josephine was treated at the house; the others were taken to Sibley.

Runaway N.Y. Girl Held by Police

A pretty 18-year-old brunette was held by Washington police for her parents last night after an ill-fated romance with a Washington street photographer.

She was picked up in a rooming house in the 1300 block of L street northwest, after her parents and New York police asked officers here to help find her.

The photographer was held without charge at the First Precinct awaiting word from New York police. The girl's parents reported she disappeared about six weeks ago, following a telephone call from Washington.

Ruhland Advises Adolescent Boys To Eat Heavily

The third in a series of communications to mothers on their children's eating habits, was released yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland. This was concering children in their early teens.

Said Dr. Ruhland:

"Don't be alarmed if your teen age boy and girl act as though they would eat you out of house and home. Many boys in the teens need more food than a man, and they can use it to better advantage.

"During adolescence the body is shifting from boyhood to manhood or from girlhood to womanhood. Muscle tissues and the organs are growing at a rapid rate.

"This bodily change requires an enormous amount of energy which can be supplied only by food. They need a little more meat and eggs than in their earlier youth and plenty of lime and iron for bones and blood. Their vitamin requirements are also high . . .

"The average girl needs less food than the average boy. However, she should drink the same amount of milk and eat the same quantity of vegetables and fruits."

Anacostia Group Delays Election

The Anacostia Citizens Association, meeting last night at Anacostia Junior High School, voted to postpone election of officers until its October meeting. A nominating committee was appointed, headed by Robert Thompson and including James Thompson and Capt. Frank Dent.

John Cook was awarded first prize for appearance of his yard at 1517 T street southeast by the committee on gardens and lawns. Second prize went to Robert Thompson, 1800 Thirteenth street southeast.

The association voted to oppose rezoning of two lots in its area to second commercial sections and representatives of the organization will appear before the Zoning Commission October 5.

Police Consider . . . Adopting Pig From Seized Car

Police at the Eleventh Precinct Station were seriously thinking of adopting a pig last night—if his owner did not show up.

The station took possession of the pig last night after arresting Jay W. Jeffries, 19, former soldier at Fort Washington, Md., driver of a car which had been reported stolen here. With Jeffries were three younger boys—and the pig. Their auto was halted by police at Nichols avenue southeast, near St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Jeffries told Policeman C. D. Adams that he had struck the pig on the road, near Oxon Hill, Md. Jeffries was held for further investigation. The boys were released in custody of their parents, and the pig, none the worse for his experience, was held by the police.

2 Cheltenham Inmates Guilty In Jail Assault

Sentences Suspended 2 Others Acquitted 4 Guards Testify

Upper Marlboro, Md., Sept. 23, (AP).—Two Cheltenham Reformatory inmates were convicted and two acquitted in Prince eorge's County police court today, on assault charges resulting from a riot at the institution last week.

The four, Earl Allen, William Liggins, Theodore Cole and James Bosley, all colored, were each charged with "assaulting an officer" of the reformatory.

John Tilch, Emory Sparks, John Huthman and Bertram Hyde, all cottage masters, testified the boys threw cups at them.

Judge Merrick acquitted Allen and Cole but gave Bosley and Liggins suspended six-month sentences in the Maryland House of Correction. He ordered all four returned to Cheltenham.

State Employment Commissoner Harry C. Jones, who was ordered by Gov. Harry W. Nice to investigate the disturbance at the reformatory, was a spectator at the trial.

During the riot State and county police were summoned to Cheltenham by officials who said the inmates got out of hand. When the officers arrived, however, the trouble was over and the colored men were confined to their cottages.

Maternal And Infant Deaths Drop

Rate 61.7 Per 1,000 Total Deaths Also Cut Heart Total 2,047 Cancer Second, 879

A notable reduction in infant and maternal mortality in 1937 is noted in the annual report released yesterday by the Health Department.

Terming 1937 as one of the most progressive periods in the history of public health in the District, Health Officer George C. Ruhland said this year would offer "even a brighter prospect of life-saving."

The rate for infant mortality per 1,000 population fell from 75 in 1936 to 61.7 in 1937. Maternal mortality in the last year showed a decrease of 1.31 per 1,000 population. The figure for maternal mortality for 1937 was 5.37 per 1,000 and for the previous year 6.68 per 1,000.

All Causes Show Decrease

Although appreciable progress has been made in development and co-ordination of services to reduce maternal, infant and child mortality, Dr. Ruhland wants the services extended still further.

Deaths from all causes also disclosed a decrease for the year. On the basis of a population of 627,000 for Washington, 8,723, or 13.97 per cent, persons died from all causes. The figure for the previous year was 14.69.

Heart disease continued to lead the list of causes of death. There were 2,047 deaths from heart disease; cancer caused 879 deaths; pneumonia, 761; tuberculosis (all forms), 595; cerebral hemorrhage, 588; nephritis (chronic), 569; accidents, 512; prematurity, 294; arteriosclerosis, 197; diabetes, 176; venereal enlarged tonsils were next.

Other causes of death were: anterior poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis), 4; diphtheria, 14; measles, 13; meningitis (epidemic cerebrospinal), 30; pellagra, 5; rocky mountain spotted fever, 4; scarlet fever, 5; tphoid fever, 12; whooping cough, 17.

Typhoid Laid to River

Dr. Ruhland states there were 30 cases of infantile paralysis reported in the year with only 4 deaths, or 13.3 per cent, while in the previous year there were reported 7 cases and 2 deaths, or 28.6 per cent.

Dr. Ruhland said that of the 70 cases of typhoid fever reported to the Health Department, 36 of the patients used water from the Potomac exclusively.

More than 82 per cent of school children examined by health inspectors were found to have physical defects. There was an average of 1.86 defects per pupil. Outstanding defect was bad teeth and enlarged tonsils were next.

Teachers applying for positions also go through a health examination. Of 1,951 applicants who were examined, 23.2 per cent were passed and 75.5 per cent were passed conditionally.

Meet Hugo

Hollywood's idea of a football coach, like Hollywood's idea of a city editor—you know the type, snarling, leather-lunged tyrants—existed for this department only in the world of make believe, until yesterday, then we met up with Hugo Bezdek.

POVICH.

Mr. Bezdek, you know, coaches the Cleveland Rams of the National Professional Football League, who on Sunday will joust with the Washington Redskins at Griffith Stadium. Mr. Bezdek is best described as a coach of the old school and a guy Hollywood has been looking for ever since the scenario writers first began typing football coaches as unfeeling ogres who would bite a hunk out of the sophomore back who fumbled on the 5-yard-line.

He's tough, Hugo Bezdek is. At least he acts it. Built on the general dimensions of an obese fireplug, he is as easy to step over as walk around. He looks able to carry out any and all of his threats to tear his young charges limb from limb when they transgress the fine points of the game, despite his 53 years. Out there at Griffith Stadium yesterday as he sent his Cleveland professionals through the practice paces he was BOSS.

Mr. Bezdek wasn't shouting his orders. He wasn't yelling. He bellowed. Woe to the 200-pounder who took one too many steps, or one too few, swinging into formation. Bezdek was on his neck, verbally, like the proverbial ton of bricks. To hear him tell it, you'd think his Cleveland football team was a gang of punks that had no right in the league.

Fines Quarterback

Mr. Bezdek glared. He raved. He ranted. He threatened to keep his squad out there at Griffith Stadium until midnight until he was satisfied with its execution of plays. He took time out to slap a 25-buck fine on his quarterback, Stan Pincura, who showed up a few minutes late for practice. He berated 'em for what he called loafing. He said everybody would be in bed by 10 p. m. or they'd be fired. He predicted dire things for 'em against the Redskins.

And then he piled 'em into their bus for the trip to the hotel where a blackboard drill awaited. And in that bus the 30 young brutes broke into song. They were unworried by Bezdek's raving. Because, you see, they know Bezdek and, in fact, they like him very much.

Because they know he's a benevolent old tyrant. He doesn't mean what he says out there on the practice field. They know him to be an excitable irascible old gent who'd go down the line for any one of 'em. They know it's merely his method of coaching football. And they respect his ability in that direction. They know he isn't asking 'em to do anything that he couldn't do himself 25, 30 years ago when he was playing in the line for Alonzo Stagg at Chicago.

He Turns Sweet

He can be a sweet old man, they know that too. Because five minutes after he had administered a tongue-lashing that could have melted the heart of an iron sarchopagus he was telling 'em: "That was nice going out there today, boys. A coupla more workouts like this and we'll lick the tar outa those Redskins. This is beginning to look like the best football team I ever coached."

And Bezdek has coached a few football teams. He was head coach at Arkansas, head coach at Oregon and head coach at Penn State before joining up with the pros. He had two of his teams in the Rose Bowl—Oregon in 1917 and Penn State in 1923. His Oregon team beat Penn, 14-0, and his Penn State club lost to Southern California, 14-3. But it seems that Bezdeck down through the years hasn't changed much.

Bill Reinhart, George Washington University's head coach, knew Bezdek 20 years ago when Reinhart was in Bezdek's Oregon backfield. Then, as now, the old gent was loud and positive and not averse to turning his tongue loose at the first sign of transgression by one of his charges.

He was the type of coach who would stop the whole works if

Greenberg's 55th and 56th Fail to Win

Indians Beat Tigers Scores, 8-1 and 6-5 Hank Leads Ruth Feller in Form

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 24.—Hank Greenberg moved within four home runs of equaling Babe Ruth's major league record of 60 today, driving out his fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth circuit blows of the season in the second game of a double-header between the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians here. Greenberg hit the ball into the leftfield stands off Earl Whitehill's delivery to lead off the Tiger fourth and sixth innings.

GREENBERG

The Indians won both games, taking the opener, 8 to 1, and the nightcap, 6 to 5. Bob Feller held the Tigers to six hits in the first game.

With his second homer, Greenberg shattered the major league record for hitting two or more round-trippers in one game the most times during a season. His two today marked the tenth time this season he has clouted a pair in a game. The previus mark of nine was set by Jimmy Foxx, of the Boston Red Sox, earlier this season, and equaled by Greenberg last Saturday.

Calvin Griffith Pilots Charlotte to Pennant

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 23.—Calvin Griffith, son of Clark C Griffith, tonight piloted his Charlotte Hornets to the championship of the Piedmont League in his first season as manager of the club. Charlotte defeated the Rocky Mount club, 8-1, in the final and decisive game of the play-off series.

Young Griffith's team which last night tied the series at 3-3, led throughout tonight's battle in which Joe Haynes, husky right hander, held Rocky Mount scoreless for eight innings.

It was Haynes' fifth victory of the play-off series. He has already been ordered to report to the Nats' spring training camp in 1939.

The victory of the Charlotte club was a triumph of the Washington farm system over the Red Sox farm system inasmuch as Rocky Mount's franchise is operated by the Boston American League club.

Easterners Beaten, 19-0, By Episcopal

1,500 Fans See Game Invaders Powerful Fumbles Are Costly Bill Goodwin Stars

Episcopal High opened its football season yesterday at Eastern Stadium with a 19-to-0 victory over Eastern before 1,500 spectators.

With Bill Goodwin bearing the brunt of the running attack and Edley Craighill connecting with passes, Episcopal scored its opening touchdown in the first period and added two more in the third quarter.

After receiving the opening kickoff, Eastern was unable to gain in three line plays and Best punted poorly to Eastern's 40-yard line. Three consecutive line plunges by Goodwin resulted in a first down at the 30-yard stripe. Craighill then heaved a pass to Johnny Woodward for another first down at the 19.

Following this play, Goodwin dashed around end on a spinner play for 12 yards to Eastern's 5 After a line plunge had failed, Craighill passed to Eddie Bradfield in the end zone for a touchdown. Woodward's attempted place kick was blocked.

Fumbles Are Costly

Fumbles at costly times, more than anything else, hurt the Easterners in their attempts to penetrate the Episcopal line, which outweighed the Inter-High champions by six pounds to the man.

There was little action of any importance in the second quarter. Most of the play was confined to midfield with both teams making short gains and satisfying themselves with waging a putting duel. Episcopal was armed three-deep in each position and Coach Dick Cardwell spent most of the second quarter making substitutions. The half ended with Eastern in possession of the ball on her own 47-yard line.

If the second quarter was dull, Episcopal's first offensive play of the second half marked a sharp contrast, for on this play, with the ball on Episcopal's 35-yard line, Edley Craighill dashed through a gaping hole off tackle and sprinted 65 yards for the Alexandrians' second touchdown of the afternoon.

Champions Come Back

Once again, Woodward's attempted placement was blocked. After this touchdown, the Inter-High champs came back with a vengeance, and with Dick Best and Ray Soo alternating in carrying the ball, advanced from Eastern's 40 to Episcopal's 30-yard line, where the Episcopal line braced and took the ball on downs.

Washington-Lee Eleven Victor

Led by Alec Andersen, a converted center who was making his first start as a member of the backfield, the Washington-Lee High School football team defeated the National Training School, 13-0, before 2,500 spectators yesterday at Ballston Stadium. It was the first game of the season for both teams.

Andersen accounted for the Little Generals' entire point total in the second quarter when, soon after the opening of the period, he climaxed a fifty-yard march by plunging over the goal line from the three-yard stripe. His attempted placement sailed wide of the goal posts.

James Mullen, Princeton Senior, Tops Scores Arthur Wullschleger Also Finishes High Tom Cooper and Fred Jacoby Show Speed One of Motor Craft Is Overturned

By Jack Munhall.

The President's Cup Regatta headed into the homestretch yesterday on a choppy, wind-blown Potomac River where the outboard hydroplanes, buzzing like a swarm of angry mosquitoes, launched the three-day motorized section of the twelfth annual event. The 16 races were dominated by four drivers, two professionals, two amateurs.

These small, low-slung craft, churning the muddy water into a soapy froth almost steadily from early morning until late afternoon, whetted the appetite of a large audience for the bigger events scheduled today and tomorrow and also afforded the thousands along the Hains Point seawall a thrilling exhibition of skillful driving and daredevil chance-taking.

The upshot of it all was that a pair of downy-cheeked collegians, James Mullen, Princeton University senior, and Arthur Wullschleger, Cornell University sophomore, and Thomas Cooper and Fred Jacoby, professional veterans, split individual honors fairly even between them.

Though no prize was forthcoming for point leader, young Mullen, could claim such an award for his 2,900 points, 100 better than Cooper. Wullschleger accumulated 2,025 points and Jacoby, a slight disappointment, made 1,950.

It soon was apparent this quartet was to furnish a major portion of the drama and individual duelling, ever a feature of the Regatta. Wullschleger and Mullen, amateurs that they are, dominated virtually every event in their section and Jacoby and Cooper likewise completely overshadowed the professional field.

Mullen put together victories in the class B, class C and class F open races, and a second place in the class A for his winning margin. Wullschleger won the class A, finished second in the class B, and picked up 300 points each in the class C and class F open races.

Cooper won classes A and C, finished second in class B and second in the class F open. Jacoby won class B, finished second in class A, and third in class C.

Only One Spill

Though a 15-mile an hour wind whipped across the river throughout most of the day, there was only one spill, and that produced no injury to either the victim or his boat. It occurred in the second lap of the first heat of class B professional race when Charles Blake, of Wilmington, N. C., in a frantic effort to match speed with Jacoby and Cooper, tumbled over backward, his boat rising in the air and flinging him into the water. Blake, equipped with a life saver, was thrown only a few feet from his boat and managed to swim to it without aid from the Coast Guard cutters which rushed to his rescue. He righted his boat but made no attempt to pick up the race.

It was a poor day for District competitors, of which there were very few. A great deal of interest centered on C. Bache Gill, jr., 12-year-old son of the President Cup Regatta Association official, as he made his racing debut in the midget amateur event. But the diminutive young-star found the pace a bit too hot and finished last in a field of six.

Daring Cooper Is 64

The spectacular success of Cooper, the Richmond rider, sets the stage for a family drama which will continue today when his father defends his 225-cubic-inch hydroplane championship in the race for the John Charles Thomas trophy.

The start of the President's Cup Race, first prize for which is a $10,000 gold cup, is likely to be unique in that there will be but one entry. As far as was known last night, Count Theo Rossi, Italian-born millionaire sportsman and recent winner of the gold cup, is the only sure entrant. Where Jack

Patty Berg, Mrs. Page In Finals

Patty Beats Miley Page Whips Graham Miley's Putting Off Berg Seeks Revenge

By the United Press.

So tomorrow at 36 holes it's the 20-year-old Minneapolis college freshman against a 31-year-old housewife, battling for the title for the second straight year.

Patty, whose record of nine victories in her last 12 tournaments, can't be touched by any active golfers, entered the finals by defeatitng her old nemisis, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., 2-up, while Mrs. Page was crushing Peggy Graham, of Hollywood, Calif., 8 and 7 with the hottest round of the tournament.

Mrs. Page's first 9 of 35 was four under par. She apparently is at her peak, playing as well or better than she did at Memphis, Tenn., last fall when she beat Miss Berg for the title, 7 and 6.

But the galleries followed Patty, and they hailed her as the coming champion. She couldn't clinch the match until the eighteenth green, but Miss Miley always has been tough for Patty. Until this year, Marion had won the 72-hole Western Derby three times, with Patty second.

They came up to the eighteenth with Patty 1-up. Both dropped their second shots into the same trap at the side of the Green. Patty's explosion shot was 3 feet away; Miley's 15. Marion missed her putt and she conceded the hole.

Iron Shots Accurate

Mrs. Page's first nine holes included three birdies and an eagle. She won all but two holes of that nine and halved the others, turning seven up on her less experienced opponent.

Miss Graham managed to halve the first hole in fives, the short fifth in three and the eleventh, where the match ended, in five. Her putter cost her the second and fourth, taking three to go down after she hit the green, but on the other holes Mrs. Page won outright.

Hoya Golfer Wins, 3 and 2 After Rally

Billy Dettweiler Upset Nolan Also Beaten Congressional Site Victor Was Favorite

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

John P. Burke, Georgetown's red-haired National Intercollegiate champion, added District of Columbia Amateur Golf champion to his numerous titles yesterday at Congressional as he rallied to defeat the host club's surprise finalist, Frank M. Goodwin, jr.

Burke, the 20-year-old Providence, R. I., student, a member of the Capital Golf and Country Club since Monday, won by a 3 and 2 margin over Goodwin, who reached the finals with a morning upset over Billy Dettweiler, 3 and 1, while Burke was trouncing M. Parker Nolan, third semi-finalist from the Congressional Club, by a 5 and 4 margin.

Both Burke and Goodwin suffered a let-down from their previous near-par performances in the final round, but the Georgetown junior was there in the pinches and his form play on the last four holes, after being even at the twelfth, was the finest finish of the year.

Burke is Favorite

Goodwin, former member of the Cambridge University golf team, was a decided underdog, despite his consecutive upset wins over Roger Peacock and Dettweiler, and Burke's many backers were giving from 4-to-1 to 8-to-1 odds on the outcome, despite the fact that Goodwin was from the host club.

Goodwin won the first hole with a bogey six as Burke, who had an off-day with his putter, required four from a trap near the green. Johnny again three-putted, on the second, and was two down. He won one back at the third as Goodwin pitched in a trap in two, and evened the match on the fifth with a par when Goodwin failed to hit his second out of the rough.

A perfect shot for a birdie on the eighth gave Johnny the lead for the first time, but he lost it on the twelfth by trapping his tee shot on the par-three hole while Goodwin was 10 feet from the pin and easily down in par.

Even at the end of 12 holes where he was figured to have been well up, Burke hit a sub-par spurt, with four-straight perfectly played holes, to clinch the title on the sixteenth green.

Couldn't Match Accuracy

On the 13th Burke was on in two and down in two putts for a birdie. The 14th, a 225-yard par three, the college champion knocked his tee shot within 15 inches of the pin for a birdie and a two-hole lead, was four feet from the pin on 15 and two feet away on 16, with approach shots, as Goodwin failed to match his streak. The latter was not sure whether he was two or three down and Wifty Cox had to inform him the match was over and congratulations were in order.

Burke added the Rhole Island State Amateur and Open titles since his intercollegiate triumph in June, and yesterday's win was his fourth title of the year.

Terps Open Grid Season With Spiders

Play at College Park Kick-Off at 2:30 P.M. Both Teams Veterans Sophs May Be Used

Maryland's football team will be making history this afternoon when it opens its season against Richmond at College Park, at 2:30. It will be the first time it ever has started a campaign against a Southern Conference rival.

It should be one of the best opening games played here in years as both will trot mainly veteran teams on the field when the first whistle blows.

Another interesting angle to the contest is that Frank Dobson, Maryland's head mentor, was at the helm at Richmond for 20 years and nothing would cut him deeper than to be defeated by tthe Spiders. On the other hand, victory would be extremely sweet for Richmond.

Maryland has 11 letter men on its squad and eight of them will be in the starting line-up, the others being two juniors and one soph, the rookie honors going to George Glenger, who never played football until last fall as a Terp yearling.

Richmond has 15 "R" men in its squad but despite this will use three or four sophs who have proved superior to the veterans.

Maryland will present an offense that is made up about equally of running and passing plays, while Richmond will rely mainly on its highly developed aerial game in an effort to upset the Terps. Richmond has a wealth of backs who can pass expertly and several ends who also are great snaggers.

In fact, its material is highly adapted to the passing game and the Spiders intend to take full advantage of their assets.

Maryland will start a team that has been working together almost since the outset of practice.

Nats and Athletics Will Battle Today

Idle since Tuesday, the Nats will play some more baseball today when they engage the Philadelphia Athletics at Shibe Park.

New hopes for a first-division finish loom for the Nats following the Tigers' double defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Indians yesterday. The Detroit club's fourth-place margin over the Nats was reduced to 3½ games.

Manager Bucky Harris is expected to send his rookie southpaw, Joe Krakauskas against the A's today.

Budge, Mako, Alice Marble Advance to Net Finals

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Donald Budge and Gene Mako, boon companions and doubles partners since they teethed on tennis raquets out in California, qualified today to play each other here tomorrow in the finals of the National Men's Tennis Championships.

Two weeks ago, when the tournament began, you probably could have got odds of 100-to-1 against Mako's reaching the final. Yet today in overwhelming Jack Bromwich, of Australia, before a cheering section of 15,000 in the stadium by scores of 6—3, 7—5, 6—4, the big fellow looked like a great tennis player.

Budge, the defending champion, was equally impressive as he came along a few minutes later and splattered Sidney Wood, jr., 6—3, 6—3, 6—3, in the other semifinal. But Budge was supposed to do it; Mako wasn't.

The crowd sat and couldn't believe its eyes as Mako, who has specialized in winning doubles championships with Budge for the last four years, flashed a spectacular offensive game to bedazzle and beat the Australian star. Bromwich wasn't at his best after the week's inactivity due to rain, but it is doubtful he has seen the day he could have restrained the Mako of this afternoon.

Before the main excitement started, Alice Marble, of Los Angeles, had nosed out Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., in a weird women's semifinal, 5—7, 7—5, 7—5. The two girls took turns going to pieces in the treacherous wind currents that swirled about the court. In tomorrow's final Miss Marble, champion two years ago, will tackle Nancy Wynne, the free-hitting Australian girl. They play at 12:30 (E.S.T.) with the men's so-called battle to follow.

Mako today had absolute command of the ball, dropping dozens of lobs right on the back line and sending scores of teasing drop-shots just trickling over the net. He had Bromwich flabbergasted with his spinning backhand returns that rose only inches after biting the soggy turf. When Bromwich gave him an overhead to hit, it was final. He scored 41 placements, practically all from the net.

Budge was as hilarious as anyone else at Mako's victory.

"Sure I'm glad Gene has reached the final," he said. "Nope, I won't throw him a set tomorrow. I haven't lost one in the four big championships, and if Gene wins one from me he'll have to do it the hard way. However, the way he looked today he might have to throw me a set."

Intersectional Games Feature Today's Gridiron Schedule

Down In Front

—By Richards Vidmer

The coach looked up as the door opened and thrust out a big hand of welcome. A wide grin of hospitality spread across his face as he motioned to a chair.

"Come in. Come right in. Sit down," he boomed. "Glad to see you again. What can I do for you? Glad to do anything I can."

VIDMER.

"Well, coach," said the reporter meekly, "I just dropped in to see what kind of team you're going to have this fall."

"Haw!" roared the coach, leaning back to the danger point in his swivel chair. "Haw! that's good. What kind of team am I going to have, eh? Say, I wish you would tell me! How do I know what kind of team I'm going to have? Why, we haven't played a game yet. Hardly had three weeks to practice."

"But I'll tell you a couple that will be good," volunteered the coach. "Pittsburgh, for one, Jock Sutherland lost a lot of good men last June—Matisi and Souchak and Patrick and some others. But he'll have a fine team. Just as good as ever. This will be Goldberg's last season and should be his best. And then he's got Chickerneo, Stebbins and Cassiano as running mates for Goldie. That's quite a backfield. With Daddio and Hoffman on the ends it ought to be one of Pitt's greatest teams, even if replacements are necessary from tackle to tackle."

"Fordham may not be as good as it has been the last few seasons. Jim Crowley lost a lot of good linemen and his backs are green. But he has a couple of fine pivot men in Kuzman, a Sophomore tackle everyone says is a line in himself, and Principe, the fullback.

"Syracuse should be among the leaders in this section with Sidat Singh and Hooper, the standout players of the team. Temple will be stronger than it seems. They have a terrific schedule and are sure to lose two or three games. But Pop Warner has a lot of good men down there."

The Round-Up

"What about the Ivy League teams?" he was asked.

"Well, Dartmouth and Cornell should be the standouts," said the coach. "Dartmouth has a whole squad of veterans, and with last year's second string and freshmen for reinforcements they will be three deep in every position. You may figure Bill Hutchinson, who ran wild in the Harvard game last year, and Bob McLeod, who produced most of the fireworks at New Haven, a pretty fair pair of backs, but Red Blaik has another boy I expect will outshine them both. Colby Howe. Watch that kid this fall. Bob Gibson is a grand center and—oh, the whole set-up is strong. I can't see where Dartmouth is going to lose a game, unless it is beaten by Cornell."

"A senior team that has been playing together, almost as a unit, since freshman year. That ought to be the answer. This is Snavely's third season up at Ithaca and his system ought to be clicking 100 per cent. He has fine, seasoned material—Peck, Baker, Holland and McKeever among them—and good reserves coming up from last year's freshmen. If there's a weak spot it's in the kicking, but that team won't have any kick coming. Haw!"

Boys in Blue

"What about the others?"

"Yale lost a whole backfield in Ewart, Frank, Colwell and Hessberg, but the Blue will do all right. This Bud Humphries is a better back than most people have realized, because he's had Clint Frank in front of him. But he really should reach the heights this year, and young Eddie Collins is a good boy back there, too. Then they've still got Al Wilson, and the line is practically the same as it was last year, although Miller, the end, has been moved to the backfield.

"They start right off with Columbia and play a pretty stiff schedule, but if they can get by Lou Little's team, they should be on their way. Columbia may surprise them, though.

"That Little is a foxy fellow and he may be set to take Yale. He can't win many, but he might win that one. Not much material at Columbia, except Sid Luckman, but he's a whole team in himself.

Rochester Beaten By Bears, 9-0

Newark, N. J., Sept. 23 (U.P.).—The Newark Bears defeated the Rochester Red Wings 9-0 tonight to win their way in the International League playoff final. The victory gave the Bears the best of seven series—four games to three.

In the final best of seven series for the Governor's Cup the Bears will meet Buffalo's Bisons in the first game tomorrow at Newark.

Gophers Vs. Cougars

Pitt Tackles W. Va.
South Sees Action

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 23.—The calendar says tomorrow is Sept. 24, but a glance at the national football schedule makes it look more like the last of October with such intersectional clashes as Alabama-Southern California and Minnesota-Washington promising to send all early season attendance records tumbling.

Not in recent years, anyway, have so many major teams come together so early in the season. The Alabama-Southern California game at Los Angeles figures to draw 70,000 spectators, with another 50,000 at Minneapolis to watch the Gophers' new juggernaut do battle with Washington's veteran backfield and untried forward line.

The Crimson Tide, already an announced candidate for the 1929 Rose Bowl game, will send into the fray a mammoth line averaging 203 pounds. At that, it will outweigh the Trojans only three pounds. Both elevens will line up with proven backfields.

From an attendance viewpoint, the clash between California, conqueror of Alabama in last January's Rose Bowl game, and Slip Madigan's newest edition at St. Mary's ranks with the two major intersectional games. They expect to draw 60,000 at Berkeley.

In addition to Minnesota, two other Big Ten elevens swing into action. Illinois and always tough Ohio University will play at Champaign before 22,000, while Purdue, minus Cecil Isbell, takes on Gus Dorais' Detroit University outfit at Lafayette, with 16,000 expected to attend.

The Eastern program is headed by the all-important game between Pittsburgh's powerful Panthers, featuring All-America Marshall Goldberg and West Virginia's dangerous Mountaineers at Pittsburgh. Both of the service elevens open the Army meeting the University of Wichita in a game for which the Wheatshockers have pointed and the Navy tangling with William and Mary, their traditional opening game opponent. The Pitt-West Virginia game figures to draw 30,000, as compared with 15,000 at Annapolis and 8,000 at West Point.

The South loses no time swinging into conference warfares. Louisiana State will attempt to spoil Harry Mehre's coaching debut at Mississippi before 20,000 fans. Another 20,000 are expected to see Tennessee and Sewanee pry off the Southeastern Conference lid at Knoxville. Georgia and Tulane go into the Southern Conference for their opponents, the former meeting Citadel and the latter Clemson. Vanderbilt meets Washington University at St. Louis.

Important Southern Conference games matches Duke-V. P. I., North Carolina State-Davidson and North Carolina-Wake Forest, while South Carolina goes to Cincinnati to battle an "unknown" Xavier eleven.

In the Southwest, Texas Christians air-minded Horned Frogs tackle Centenary, always tough for the Southwest Conference teams. Texas travels to Lawrence to meet Kansas and Oklahoma A. and M. Aggies take on Arkansas.

W.-L. Eleven Wins First

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 23.—Washington and Lee trailed Hampden-Sydney three periods today and then opened up a smashing drive in the fourth that sent them 76 yards down the field to the 12-yard line where they scored on a pass to win, 7-6.

Howard Dobbins, lanky sophomore end, scored the touchdown that tied the score on a pass from Ray Craft, and booted a placement for the extra point that gave the Generals the game.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 23.—Another of Uncle Sam's "mystery" ships—Navy's 1938 varsity eleven, goes out for its shakedown cruise tomorrow afternoon on Farragut Field, engaging a potent and vengeful William and Mary squad in the opening game of the season. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

A colorful throng of 20,000 fans, about capacity, is expected to jam "Crabtown" for the game. The entire regiment of midshipmen is back at the Academy, and the vanguard of visitors began arriving late this afternoon. By noon tomorrow the village will be in the throes of another football fever.

William and Mary's squad, 40 strong, arrived in Annapolis at noon today, and after a light lunch took over the field for a brief drill. The session was devoted exclusively to signals, punting and passing practice, and calisthenics. The Indians appeared to be in fine fettle, and are in an ugly frame of mind for the battle.

Virginians Have Punch

With 14 lettermen back in the fold, including Gus Twiddy, candidate for All-America quarterback, the Virginians have a punch that may stop the Middies. They still remember the 45-0 drubbing Navy handed them last year, and are ready for their best performance of the season in an effort to atone for that loss.

William and Mary defeated Naval Training Station last week in its coming out engagement by a score of 27-0.

"Fire With Fire"

The Middies will fight fire with fire, for Head Coach Hank Hardwick has equipped his men with a deceptive aerial attack which he hopes will carry them to victory. This eleven is one of the greenest ever turned out at the Academy, and Hardwick believes it will be necessary to rely on passes until the wrinkles are ironed out of ground plays.

Lem Cooke, quarterback, will bear the brunt of the passing, with Emmett Wood doing most of the ball carrying and punting. The Navy attack is built around this pair. Navy's line is big but rather slow, and may find its match in William and Mary's forward wall, which is touted as husky and fairly quick on its collective feet.

A preliminary game between the Plebes and Georgetown University Freshmen will start promptly at 1 o'clock, and will be played on the lower field. The varsity line-ups:

Army Eleven Meets Wichita

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP).—A heavily loaded University of Wichita football team rolls into the East tomorrow to help open Army's home season with a game in Michie Stadium.

Advance notices say the Westerners are bringing a team of veterans, backed by plentiful reserves, to entertain the Army. On the other hand, the Cadets have been slowed up in their preparations by a week or more of continuous rains. Most of the recent army drills have been held indoors.

Fredericksburg Scores Over G. W. Gridders, 14-12

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 23.—Ben Plotnicki's Fredericksburg High School eleven sprang the first upset of Virginia's scholastic football season tonight, staging a great second half comeback to turn back George Washington High, 14-12 in the season's first game for both schools. An estimated crowd of 3,000 saw the Yellow Jackets pass their way to victory in the final two periods.

George Washington, a heavy favorite at the kickoff, lived up to its pre-game rating in the first half, but folded up completely in the last two periods before a bewildering Jacket offensive.

Cubs Win Double Bill Now Trail 2 Games Reds Beat Bucs, 5-4

Walters' Single Wins

Tilt Goes 12 Innings

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23.—Cincinnati's rascally Reds pusheds across a run in the twelfth inning today to nip the Pirates 5 to 4 and chop the Bucs' National League lead to two games over Chicago's climbing Cubs.

TRAYNOR

After cannonading four runs across with two homers, to come from behind in the sixth, the Rhinelanders romped home in the third extra chapter when Bucky Walters, who pitched the entire distance and gave up only seven hits, singled Harry Craft across from second.

The defeat, coupled with Chicago's doubleheader win at Philadelphia, sliced a game and a half from the Bucs' lead and made the senior circuit race tighter than ever, what with six more games between the Pirates and Reds, and three between the Bucs and Cubs still to come.

Rip Collins Stars

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—The Chicago Cubs bounced into the thick of the fight for the National League pennant today, taking both ends of a doubleheader from the Phillies, 3 to 2 and 7 to 6, to climb within two games of the pace-setting Pittsburgh Pirates.

HARTNETT

The Bruins came from behind in each game, winning the second with a thrilling four-run rally in the ninth, climaxed by Rip Collins' double with the bases full. An eighth-inning homer by Augie Galan won the first game.

Hugh Mulcahy held the Cubs hitless for the first four innings of the opener, but in the fifth Carl Reynolds' triple, singles by Ken O'Dea and Rip Collins and a long fly by Bill Jurges tied the score at 2—2. Jack Russell, who replaced Kirby Higbee, received credit for the victory when Galan homered in the eighth.

Tony Sylvester To Coach Hoya Golf Team

Tony Sylvester, Capital Golf and Country Club professional, will serve as professional and coach to the Georgetown University golf team when the Hoyas make their Eastern and national championship bids next year, The Rev. John Kehoe, S. J., faculty administrator of athletics, made the announcement.

Sylvester will also give group lessons to the Georgetown students and take charge of the freshman golf team.

Sylvester and Father Kehoe will meet next week and further the plans.

He will accompany the team on all trips, take charge of the play and practice, at the Capital Club. He will also lend a hand in the schedule and has plans for several local club matches.

The team will play from the Capital Club, excepting the ones that are members of Congressional.

Johnny Burke, intercollegiate champion, will head the team in quest of the national laurels. They have not had a professional coach in previous years. Capital and Georgetown played two team matches last year.

Flaherty Will Take Wraps Off Farkas

Detroit Rookie to Play Tomorrow
Redskins Ready to Tackle Rams
Free Scoring Battle Is Expected

Redskin coaches are prepared to take the wraps off Andy Farkas tomorrow afternoon.

The stout-legged rookie from Detroit may not be in the starting lineup against the Cleveland Rams but he won't be restrained long after the opening whistle, for several reasons.

The chief reason is that Farkas last week demonstrated that he represents the Redskins' chief scoring threat, with Sammy Baugh and Riley Smith on the sidelines, and Redskin coaches expecting a free-scoring battle with the Rams.

Hesitant to entrust the rookie with much of the ball-carrying duties in the early games, Coach Ray Flaherty last week was forced to gamble against the Brooklyn Dodgers and was ageably surprised by Farkas' exhibition.

Farkas blossomed as the finest back on the Redskins' team that afternoon with his fancy ball carrying and breath-taking punt returns. With a bit better blocking he would have scored at least twice, as the Redskin coaches saw it.

So tomorrow afternoon it is expected that Farkas will be one of the heavy-duty members of the Redskin backfield, along with Bill Hartman, who will quarterback the team.

Coach Ray Flaherty, confident that his line can stop the Rams' running game, yesterday stressed the aerial defenses in a long morning workout. He anticipates a flurry of passes from the Rams, who have averaged 30 heaves in each of their two games thus far.

The Cleveland club was literally driven through workouts by Coach Hugo Bezdek at Griffith Stadium yesterday. Bezdek had his charges on the field both in the morning and afternoon.

Except for an ankle injury being nursed by End Ray Hamilton, the Rams are fit for the game, according to Bezdek. Dale Prather, former George Washington star, is slated to start at one of the ends for the Rams. Nelson Peterson, diminutive speed boy of the Rams' backfield who was released last year by the Redskins, is expected to be one of the Rams' starting backs.

Marjorie Smith Bowls 182 Game

Marjorie Smith, member of the Peerless team, hung up an all-time District women's bowling record last night, when she rolled a 182 game, in District League competition at the Arcadia Bowling Alleys.

Miss Smith also turned in the high set with 392. High team game and set was made by United Typewriters with 549 and 1,566, respectively.

Stars Tee Off Today

By the Associated Press.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Having separated the wheat from the Chaff in the $13,500 "Westchester 108" tournament officials let the Chaff play today over the Soggy Fenway Golf Club course and the results were sad.

There wasn't a single big name golfer among today's 80 starters in a tourney that has drawn almost all the big names of golf. As a result, Fenway's par of 70 never was in danger of cracking, and two little-known pros from the metropolitan area and an even less-known amateur from Bridgeport, Conn., shared the lead at the end of the day's firing.

The pros were Andy Lapola, of Florham Park, N. J., and Tony Tiso, of Eastchester, N. Y. The amateur was Tony Kosinski. All three shot 72's, two over par, as only 27 players broke 80.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Three Maryland pros were among the 80 starters in today's opening 18-hole round of the "Westchester 108" golf tournament at the Fenway Golf Club, but only one finished among the leaders. He is Andy Gibson, of the Bonnie View Club, Pikesville, who went out in 39, four over par, then raced home in 34, the best nine-hole score of the day, for a 73. That left him one stroke off the pace.

Lewis Worsham, jr., of the Chevy Chase Club, barely made the break—80 grade with a 79, while William Parker, of Towson, Md., was 13 strokes off the pace with an 85

Roman Lady Wins Churchville Purse at Havre de Grace

Post Scripts

With each succeeding day so much of Leonard J. Mitchell's publicity extolling Jules Koshlop, the Hoyas' sophomore halfback find, seeps into this department that we can't wait to see the young man in action . . . Koshlop has been described by "Leaping Leo" as a combination of Bronko Nagurski, Sammy Baugh and Cliff Battles, only he passes with more accuracy than Sammy . . . Maybe Mitco is not far wrong, at that. Steve Owen, coach of the New York football Giants, saw Koshlop compete in a football contest in New York two years ago and remarked that the Garfield, N. J., boy was the finest schoolboy passer he'd ever seen . . . Linotype operators are wearing that glum expression again. Small wonder when you looke at the lineups of teams like Catholic University and Fordham. The Rams, you know, have some pips, like Konetsky, Merkovsky, Raskowski, Gurczenski and Lezousky. One thing, though, the operators can make typographical errors, and nobody'll ever know the difference . . .

They say West Virginia's going to knock off the mighty Panther Saturday in the first game for both teams, but we've heard some smart football men taking the Pittsburgh eleven at even money and giving two touchdowns to boot . . . They could name an All-American backfield right now and look no further than Pitt. Stebbins, Chickerneo, Goldberg and Cassiano. Whew! . . . Who Cares Department . . . Bill Kirchem, Tulane tackle, is probably the fastest lineman in the country. Ran the 100 in 10 flat as a member of Green Wave track squad . . . George Marshall suggested the name, "Old Soak," for that play Arch McDonald is starring in . . .

Norvelle Sharpe's doing a swell job with publicity on the President's Cup Regatta. The rest of 'em are too, but Sharpe's been especially helpful to the press . . . Billy Richardson, the Central boy who went to George Washington with such a football name only to practically die in oblivion, is set this year. Watch his smoke! And watch the George Washington team, too. No less an authority than Frank Dobson, respected Maryland coach, is of the opinion that Bill Reinhart's got sumpin.' Which would give the Capital at least three worthy collegiate elevens? Catholic is loaded and Maryland's as good as last year . . .
JACK MUNHALL.

Bold Stroke Is Second In Feature

Gilbert Rides Victor Mutuels Pay $4 Evening Shadow 3d 8,000 See Races

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 23—Showing her best form, H. P. Metcalf's Roman Lady answered Jockey Johnny Gilbert's urging to win the Churchville Purse before a crowd of 8,000 today. The hard-running daughter of Cohort and Pretty Miss finished a length in front of Bold Stroke, owned by J. C. Bradley, with Evening Shadow, from the E. D. Shaffer barn, third. Brown Moth and Up Stream completed the field in the battle over the course of a mile and 70 yards.

Roman Lady made good for the favorite players and rewarded her backers with a $4 pay-off. She stepped the route over a good track in 1:45.

Evening Shadow stepped away from the starting gate as if she would make a runaway race of the feature. But Gilbert urged Roman Lady until she was close to the leader and then placed her under restraint. Leaving the backstretch, Roman Lady challenged her rival and took the lead. Bold Stroke came up in the closing stages to take the place money from the pacemaker.

Double Pays $29.50

The first ideal racing day this week, brought out a crowd of 8,000 and those who played the combination of "8 and 7" collected $29.50 in the daily double.

A $5.60 favorite clicked shot in the first race when The Serf left his opposition up the race track after a dash of six furlongs. Maroc, a long-shot, finished second with Topee third. Jockey L. Hardy brought the winner forward with a rush and it was all over.

Idyllic, an old Charles Town friend, won her second purse of the session here in the second race with an $8.70 price tag attached. She survived to score by a neck over Moon Harvest. Prowl, the favorite, ran sideways in the stretch and finished third.

Dog Flower Wins

The favorite players returned to form in the third event. Dog Flower, representing the Millsdale Stable, did most of the running and won by a length from a fast-closing Patsey Begone, the mare which paid $117 in her previous start. Graeme Cracker was the third horse. Dog Flower paid $4.50.

San Antioca joined the growing list of two-time winners at the meeting in the fifth race. Moving up in class, she picked up Gilbert as the rider and bounced away to win by a length over New Deal. Knight Warrior finished third in the test of a mile and a sixteenth. The winner paid a surprising $12.70 mutuel.

At The Post

Selections at Havre de Grace.

Dear Al: Bowie is making improvements that will be ready when the fall session opens at that track in November. The steward's stand has been removed and a crow's nest has been built for them at the top of the grandstand. The Jones camera also will be moved up, which should end all controversy on finishes. Last year the camera was so close it could not do its best. Little Jock, Happy Nymph and Lady's Favor have been added to Starter Milton's schooling list. The track will be fast for the $10,000 added Potomac Handicap today. The field is an excellent one, with Menow, Can't Wait and Lavengro expected to draw the bulk of the wagering. The feature is well supported and the track expects a banner crowd. Charles F. Adams, owner of the Suffolk Downs tracks, was a visitor here and signed Secretary Charles McLennan for his oval. Hypocrite is a doubtful starter today. Johnny Gilbert is slated to ride this one, but will be up on Nedayr if Hypocrite is scratched. Jock, owned by E. B. McLean, of Washington, holds the time record for the Potomac Handicap with 1:44 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. The Maryland Jockey Club will stage the Battleship Steeplechase on November 1. This race is named for Mrs. Randolph Scott's jumper, which won the Grand National this year in England. William Zakoor has sold Sea Gull to B. A. Hall. Joe W. Brown's horses have been shipped back to New York. Both Marvel rating players and the Benningites kept in the winning class yesterday. Sally Sidesaddle likes Blind Eagle in the Potomac Handicap, and Clocker Mike is going for a little of Suburbanite.

BILL.

First race—Pomary ran as an 8-1 shot in a $3,500 race at Saratoga. Finished fourth and has been freshened up since. May be the right one. Phara Belle won first out here on opening day and appears next best. Ansea is a first-time starter by Infinite that may cause trouble.

Second race—Sweet Nancy came with a rush to be second in the Eastern Shore Handicap after trailing the field. Appears much the best and I'm going to string along. Ebony Blue was fifth in a Narragansett stake and has whipped the top one. Barraca turned in a neat second last out and is dangerous.

Third race—Jolly Duchess, a winner at Delaware Park last summer, failed in a New York test. However, she has worked well and I'm taking her. Why Tarry, fourth in the mud here in $2,500 company, is a logical contender. Bartering Kate has speed and will be a factor if off alertly.

Fourth race—Infidox had poor racing luck last out but managed to get into second money. That effort put him right on edge and I look for big things in this field. Lady Maryland was fifth to good ones here last week and is dangerous. Carvola, a Bryson hope, may be close if ready for a hard race.

Fifth race—Menow was fourth in the Jerome Handicap at Belmont but is better than that effort. Takes off four pounds for this and worked well. Can't Wait takes up some weight but is fit and ready and looms as the one to beat. War Magic, fifth in a Narragansett handicap, has plenty of foot.

Sixth race—Conquer, winner of a class C handicap here, has a slight edge over this company. Count Morse was fifth to good ones at Belmont and should be in the thick of contention. Sun Alexandria moves up after winning here but is fit.

Seventh race—Chancing was second in the same kind of company last out and ran wide entering the stretch. Nancy Mae scored in the mud and is dangerous. Morun should improve with the change of track conditions.

Best bet—Sweet Nancy.

Our Guest Selector

Our Guest Selector for today is Carter Barron, The Eastern Division manager of the Loew's Theaters, used to carry a mean pigskin for Georgia Tech when that eleven was tops on the gridiron. There wasn't any "Marching Through Georgia Tech" in those days. But Carter has proven as adept at tackling the problems of entertainment as he was at tackling the opposing backs during his college days. He has been a busy man around his organization but occasionally on a sunny afternoon, Carter can root home a longshot with the best of them. His selections for today at Havre de Grace follow:

BARRON

1—Phara Belle, Pomary, Banner Girl.
2—Sweet Nancy, Barraca, Chatabit.

Cotton Dips; December 7.87

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Cotton turned easier today under near-month liquidation and scattered selling influenced by a gloomy view of the European crisis. December sold off from 7.97 to 7.86 and closed at 7.87. Final prices were 7 to 8 points net lower.

The market opened unchanged to 2 points lower with the effects of steady Liverpool cables offset by nervousness over conditions in Europe. Aside from trade buying of near months and foreign demand for later months, demand was slow. The market developed easiness in the afternoon when support from abroad let up and heaviness of the stock market also caused a little local selling. More active selling in October was fairly well taken.

War Flare Lifts Wheat 1⅞ Cents

Purchase of 1,000,000 Bushels in Canada Factor in Advance

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Sudden darkening of peace prospects in Europe whirled Chicago wheat values up 1⅞ cents today, but war fright lessened later, and extreme gains shriveled half.

Assertions which soon suffered contradiction that there had been serious invasion of Czech territory were largely responsible for the maximum jumps of prices. Another stimulus was export purchasing of 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat.

Fears expressed of a possible collapse of the Anglo-German diplomatic conference were among the factors that temporarily brought about soaring of wheat. Tumbles of British exchange rates also attracted sharp notice.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¾-1¼ higher compared with yesterday's finish, Dec. 65⅛-¼, May 66-66⅛, corn ¼-½ up, Dec. 49⅝-¾, May 52-52⅛, oats ⅜ advanced, rye showing ⅝-1¼ bulge, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents climb.

Stocks React to Unfavorable Aspect of European Crisis With General Declines Closing at Day's Low

New York, Sept. 23.—Financial markets today reflected the turn for the worse in European affairs. Prices were sharply lower at the opening, continued to decline through the session and closed around the worst levels of the day, with coppers, motors and the rail shares weakest. Continental currencies weakened against dollar exchange with the exception of Belgian francs, which were steady. Wheat rose ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel at Chicago and more at Winnipeg on war-speculator buying. Cotton receded a few points.

The break in security prices was the most severe since the bear session of September 13. The composite for the 100 key stocks in the big board list was off 1.13 points, with 70 utilities losing an average of 1.31 points and 30 rails 0.71 point.

Scare headlines in the newspapers indicating the breakdown of the Chamberlain-Hitler conference and detailing steps which the Democratic bloc in Europe may be forced to take unless German demands on Czechoslovakia are modified, restrained the buying side and caused many timid holders to let go. There was a flood of unconfirmed rumors, including one that Great Britain had ordered general mobilization. Tickers printed the Czech mobilization news after the close of the market. The San Francisco market, in session two hours after the end of trading here, witnessed a continuation of the decline in pivotal shares. General Motors, Steel common, Chrysler and Standard Oil of California were included.

Decline Is General

The unanimity of the downward movement was illustrated by the fact that 599 of 730 stock exchange issues traded ended behind minus symbols and only 47 shares advanced. U. S. Steel common, Montgomery Ward, Chrysler, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Woolworth, Union Pacific, Sears Roebuck, Johns Manville, International Harvester, Telephone and American Smelting were a few of many active stocks which lost two or more points. Food and oil shares were most resistant, due more to dullness, however, than to buying support. Volume for all stocks was 721,300 shares.

The more-than-seasonal advance in revenue freight car loadings indicative of the quickened pace of business probably contributed a little much-needed stiffening to the carrier section where Grade A issues were much softer than the speculative descriptions. The same applied to rail bonds. Motors were, no doubt, affected by the European situation as much or more than other shares, due to indications of further restriction of export markets and implications regarding the safety of foreign plant investments. Ward's report on U. S. and Canadian assemblies was probably a bit disappointing to those who have been expecting sharper expansion in output of the new models.

Czech Bonds Drop

Listed bonds settled lower on the gloomy reports from Europe, today. Czech bonds continued their downward plunge and other foreign dollar issues likewise were unsettled. United States Treasury obligations lost fractions, while best grade corporate issues also receded. Among the more speculative bonds losses of a point or so were common, with only a few issues able to resist the trend. Turnover was $4,600,000.

Czech government 8 per cent bonds fell 5 points on the pessimistic outlook, but only ten bonds were traded. Prague 7½s fell 3 points. German and Hungarian default bonds fell sharply, and there was a little selling of French and Belgians, but Italians held. Scandinavian bonds drifted lower, despite the known desire of those countries to remain at peace. Latin-American default issues were neglected.

United States Treasury bonds showed losses ranging to ⅜ point, on a modest amount of liquidation. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations likewise receded. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds in the corporate section lost small fractions.

Speculative railroad issues fell steadily, with the losses for the session ranging from fractions to 3 points. Some of the cheaper default issues pushed through to new low ground. Holding company and convertible issues fell with related equities. Local tractions resumed their decline, and International Telephone bonds dropped because of the European mess. Other special groups also drifted lower.

Selling on Coast

San Francisco, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—A sharp selling wave was precipitated on the San Francisco Stock Exchange this afternoon by news of the Czech mobilization. The situation, however, finally leveled off and the close was fairly steady. Practically all Eastern shares closed below their final quotations on the New York board.

U. S. Treasury Again Begins To Spend Gold

Deposits $90,000,000 in Certificates in 3 Reserve Banks

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury began spending gold yesterday for the first time since April. Since April, newly acquired gold has been accumulating in the general fund, but on Tuesday the Treasury deposited $90,000,000 of gold certificates in three Federal Reserve banks, the usual process by which the metal is converted into cash.

A Treasury spokesman said that the transaction meant that gold would be converted into cash whenever necessary and that it proved that the Treasury was not "sterilizing" gold as it did prior to April.

The Treasury's general fund now contains $827,050,012 in gold, of which $450,000,000 was acquired since the first of this month. Unprecedented quantities of gold have come to this country in the last three weeks to pay for dollar credits in which foreigners sought refuge for their funds.

Last April, as part of his program to combat the recession, President Roosevelt decreed the end of formal gold sterilization. At that time $1,400,000,000 worth of gold which had been purchased with borrowed money was turned into cash by depositing gold certificates with the Federal Reserve banks.

The program before April was called "sterilization" because as fast as foreigners increased American bank deposits with the money paid them for selling gold to the Treasury, the Treasury borrowed equivalent sums of money from banks and individuals and thus prevented any net addition to the amount of money available to the banks for loans. When the policy was adopted at the end of 1936, some Government economists believed that the country was heading for an over-expansion of credit and urged gold sterilization as a method of preventing increases in the amount of money available for credit expansion.

Since April, the Treasury has borrowed no money to pay for gold. It was able to pay for the metal, without immediately converting it into gold certificate deposits, because of the large cash balance acquired in April by the desterilization that took place at that time.

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 91-day bills, and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Silver imports rose slightly last week to $6,535,968, including $4,300,000 from China, $518,556 from Mexico and $382,408 from Canada.

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—Livestock prices showed little change today at the week's decline. Transatlantic shares and British bonds finished fractions to a point down. Mining, oil and distilling issues were exceptionally heavy and foreign bonds were lower. Coppers and other base metals remained quiet.

Paris.—International securities were offered in supply as the bourse closed with an easier tone. Bank of France stock lost 25 francs, and French rentes were off 30 to 75 centimes. Royal Dutch reacted 85 francs from Thursday's close while Suez Canal continued its upward advance, gaining more than 300 francs.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures advanced 1⅛d to 1⅝d on large demands for Canadian grain and prospects of small world shipments for the week. Cotton futures were 1 point lower to 1 higher at the close. The market declined early on October liquidation and light hedge selling but moved up later on the reported delay in conversations between Hitler and Chamberlain.

Federal Land Bank Bonds.

Pirates Beat Dodgers, 17-3

Capitalize on Errors White Fails to Star 21,494 See Game

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Sept. 23.—Capitalizing on Brooklyn errors, an old habit for Ebbets Field invaders, the Pittsburgh Pirates, of the National Pro Football League, punched out a 17-to-3 victory over the Dodgers tonight. Checked for the first half by a savage Brooklyn line, the Pirates started to roll in the second half to the dismay of the 21,494 in the stands.

Two drives were halted, but when Ralph Kercheval fumbled, Ed Manske snatched the ball out of the air and dashed 27 yards for the winning touchdown.

In the fourth period, with Bill Filchok passing the ball, the Bucs drove to the Dodger 12. Stopped there, Armand Niccolai, who also kicked both conversions, dropped back and place-kicked a field goal from the 18.

he saw a play go wrong in practice and take time out for a long lecture. On the occasion, Reinhart remembers, the transgressor was Carson Bigbee, who later was to blossom as a star outfielder with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Just what was Bigbee's sin, Reinhart fails to recall but Bezdek swung into action immediately.

"Hey, you, Bigbee," he shouted, "Can't you ever learn anything? I stand out here day after day telling you how to act on that play and you go in there and mess it up. Whaddaya use for brains, anyway? You'll never get anywhere in this world. Whaddaya think you'll do when you get out o' school?"

Bigbee suffered a slight impediment in his speech but he finally mustered an answer.

Bezdek's Penn State teams were the hottest thing in football in 1921-22-23. Those were the days of Glenn Killinger, if you remember. Suspicion attached to Bezdek when the Carnegie Foundation plumped for the de-emphasis of football in the American colleges. Penn State went pure and Bezdek, as athletic director, was ordered to launch the purity program.

He did his job too well. He purged Penn State of every taint of professionalism with natural consequences. Penn State began to lose football games and the alumni began to howl for Bezdek's scalp. They got it and he retired to chicken raising on his Doylestown, Pa., farm.

The Cleveland owners brought him out of retirement last year after Cleveland obtained a professional franchise. Bezdek's team won only one of 11 games last year but at the end of the season a new contract awaited the belligerent Bohemian. He had said that it would take him three years to build a winner in Cleveland and the bosses are willing to take his word for it.

Four Swimming Marks Fall At Regatta Aquatic Meet

By Jack Munhall.

Four records were smashed, two by Lorraine Fischer, 20-year-old brunette from the Women's Swimming Association of New York, last night as the President's Cup Regatta swimming and diving meet, final event of a day crowded full of civic and sports features, was held before a full house at the Shoreham pool.

Miss Fischer broke District records in the women's 100-yard breast stroke and 150-yard individual medley, the headline event for the lassies, to emerge the outstanding star of the evening, with two handsome trophies to attest for her skill.

The other two marks lowered were by Dotty Evans, 17-year-old Broadwood A. C. entry and daughter of C. M. Evans, local employe of the Treasury Department, in the women's 100-yard free style and by Ernie Boggs, District Y color bearer, in the men's 100-yard backstroke.

Miss Evans, Middle Atlantic titleholder in every free-style event from 50 yards to 500 yards, hung up a time of 1:03.8, to clip more than four seconds off the District standard of 1:07.9 set by Marie Glazier, of Penn A. C. in 1937.

Miss Glazier lost another of her records to Miss Fischer, when the strongly-built New Yorker won the women's 150-yard individual medley in 2:01. Miss Glazier's old mark was 2:01.6. Miss Fischer's record-breaking performance in the 100-yard breast stroke found her covering the century in 1:20.6 against the old mark of 1:23, made by Margaret Hoffman, a local girl, in 1935.

Boggs, trimly built Y swimmer was shaving his own record when he covered the 100-yard backstroke in 1:06.8. He held the former meet record of 1:09.4. McClarran Pardew, of Baltimore nights of Columbus, the second-place man, also bettered Boggs' old mark. He was clocked in 1:08.4.

The program of nine events, four women's and five men's, was interrupted midway by the appearance of John A. Remon and the Regatta Queen and her perty. Remon, president of the President's Cup Regatta Association and president of the American Power Boat Association, addressed the crowd, expressing his appreciation to A. R. Weeks, head of the District A. A. U. and his associates, for their work in making the meet the grand success it was.

Miss Elizabeth Reed, Regatta Queen, a medium-built brunette, was accompanied by James A. Councilor, general chairman of the President's Cup Regatta, and Fred Huber, chairman of the parade arrangements committee.

Women's 100-yard breast stroke—Won by Lorraine Fischer (Women's Swimming Association, N. Y.); second, Ethel Sloane (Broadwood A. C.); third, Ethel Kessler (Broadwood A. C.). Time, 1:20.6. (New District of Columbia record. Old record of 1:23 made by Margaret Hoffman in 1935.)

Men's 50-yard breast stroke—Won by Neil Swan (Central H. S.); second, William Belsky (Baltimore "Y"); third, Eric Steingoff (Penn A. C.). Time, 30 seconds.

Men's 100-yard free style—Tie between Henry Steingoff (Penn A. C.), and Lutz (Reading "Y"); second, Karl Schmidt (Washington "Y"); third, Joe Gavahagan (Big Brothers A. C., Philadelphia). Time, 56 seconds.

Women's 100-yard free style—Won by Dorothy Evans (Broadwood A. C.); second, Patsy McWhorter (Newark A. C.); third, Doris Baugher (K. of C.). Time, 1:03.8. (New District and meet record. Former District record of 1:07.9 made by Marie Glazier (Penn) in 1937; old meet record of 1:08.6 made by Rita Augusterfer.)

MEN'S 100-YARD BACKSTROKE—Won by Ernie Boggs (Washington "Y"); second, McClarran Pardew (Baltimore K. C.); third, Vernon Smith (Baltimore "Y"). Time, 1:06.8. (Broke own meet record of 1:08.4.)

WOMEN'S 100-YARD BACKSTROKE—Won by Dorothy Forbes (Broadwood); second, Agnes Clark (Newark A. C.); third, Doris Cant (Broadwood). Time, 1:15.

MEN'S 300-YARD MEDLEY RELAY—Won by Baltimore K. of C. (Hacht, Pardew, LaPorte); second, District Y. M. C. A. (Boggs, Schmidt, Will); third, Shoreham (Tarbett, Koluski, Brucker).

WOMEN'S 150-YARD INDIVIDUAL MEDLEY—Won by Lorraine Fischer (Women's Swimming Association, New York); second, Patsy McWhorter (Newark A. C.); third, Agnes Clark (Newark A. C.). Time, 2:01. (New District and meet record.) Old record of 2:01 3-5, held by Marie Glazier, Penn. A. C., made in 1937.

MEN'S FANCY DIVING—Won by Bill Tarbett (Shoreham); second, Sam Hyman (Broadwood); third, Louis Neff (Broadwood). Total, 70.30.

College Students Aid In Removal of Debris

Amherst, Mass., Sept. 23 (AP).—Lecture halls at Amherst and Massachusetts State Colleges were empty today as the 2,200 students from both institutions supplemented highway crews working to clear roads leading from this college town.

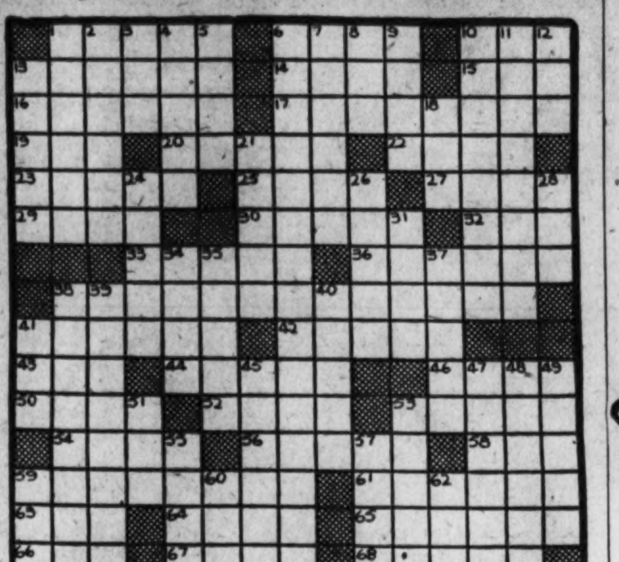

Isolated from the rest of the countryside since Wednesday's hurricane, Amherst tonight was without power for the most part and only half its telephones were in service.

Williamsburg
DREAM OF RECTOR COME TRUE

Back in 1893, Rev. W. A. R. Goodwin first visited Williamsburg. He returned in 1901 to take over the pulpit of the Bruton Parish Church and immediately started the tremendous task of restoring the one-time capital of Virginia to its original historical beauty. He interested the Rockefellers in the project—and they helped to make his dream come true. In Sunday's Post, Hedley Donovan traces the activities of Dr. Goodwin, from that first visit in 1893 to the present, nationally-famous Colonial Williamsburg.

Caspar's put out in the rain again—in Sunday's Post

Bob Burns Says—

The other day I took a trip through the San Diego harbor where the Navy fleet is anchored and when I saw all the different kinds of flags, flyin' in the breeze, I got to thinkin' that each one of those flags is a symbol of some sort that all the boys in the Navy understand. Symbols are great things for keepin' people close together.

When I asked my girl cousin why she used three different colors of writin' paper, she says, "Well, when I write to Joe, I use pink paper because that means "love;" when I write to Charley I write on blue—that means "I'm lonesome for you," and when I write to Roy, I use white paper because that means "faithful and true."

American Heads World Trade Congress

Parley Elects W. L. Batt
'Human Research' Urged
1,700 Close Session

By Sidney Olson.

Business leadership throughout the world rapidly is shifting its major emphasis from its economic responsibilities to its social responsibilities, executives of the Seventh International Management Congress agreed last night as the five-day sessions concluded.

With election of an American, William L. Batt, president, SKF industries of Philadelphia, as president of the International Committee of Scientific Management, and the choice of Stockholm as the next Congress' meeting place, in 1941, formal activities of the triennial meet were ended.

Batt, first American to hold the international office, succeeded the Rt. Hon. Viscount Leverhulme, of England. He is a past president, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, a member of the Business Advisory Council of the Department of Commerce, and long and outspokenly has advocated that business should assume the leadership in aligning capital and labor closely together in an unselfish partnership aimed at public service.

'Human Research' Stressed

The 1,700 delegates, who began their homeward journeys last night to 17 countries, heard at final sessions a series of critiques and summaries prepared by nationally-known economists and experts in management fields.

One which drew particular attention, made by Prof. Elton Mayo of the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University, noted the Congress' general admission of its insufficient knowledge of human essentials, as well as the need for systematic research in that subject, as compared with the "admirable and intensive" scientific research on materials, techniques and production.

Mayo criticised the tendency of the Congress to examine existing organization methods in great detail while paying "too little attention to human and social problems," although he asserted that this conference, more than any heretofore, had concentrated interest on human-social questions beyond immediate industrial problems.

He stressed the growing realization by business executives that "in the handling of human problems science is not enough." In this connection he outlined the "tremendous" need in business and politics for administrative training, asking for some adaptation of the medical clinical method, where young doctors pass through an interneship before qualifying for practice, in the training of young men to bear administrative burdens of the future. "Happy accident," rather than selective training, is too often and too generally relied upon to provide the executives of the future, Prof. Mayo asserted.

Cost Formulae Attacked

In the distribution section of the congress Dr. Leverett S. Lyon, executive vice president of the Brookings Institution, noted the increasingly apparent realization of the limitations of cost formulae in price-making as a significant symptom of steady progress in analysis of the cost-and-price field. He reported that the discussions of the problem constituted "a definite step away" from the idea, often "so earnestly promulgated by accountants," that costs furnish an adequate guide to price-making.

John W. O'Leary, chairman, executive committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in tackling the problem of methods possible to minimize technological unemployment, asserted that the problem actually is a minor one, since the 1930 census disclosed that less than 4 per cent of 2,500,000 unemployed persons were jobless because of technological improvements. He declared that the problem is even less pressing now since less new machinery has been installed since then while unemployment is four times as great.

O'Leary indicated that new restrictions imposed on industry by Government tended to prevent development of new employment opportunities and to lessen the number of jobs in which temporarily-displaced workers can find employment.

Virginia Synod Auxiliary to Meet Here Next Week

The woman's auxiliary of the Synod of Virginia will hold its thirty-fourth annual meeting September 27, 28 and 29 in the Central Presbyterian Church here.

The synodical auxiliary is comprised of 350 local auxiliaries of the Southern Presbyterian churches in Virginia, Maryland, parts of West Virginia, and the District. Mrs. R. P. Clarke, of 1823 Phelps place, is president, and Miss Mary Wilson, of 4337 Nebraska avenue, is secretary. Mrs. Thomas G. Carr, of 3010 Thirteenth street, is president of the hostess auxiliary.

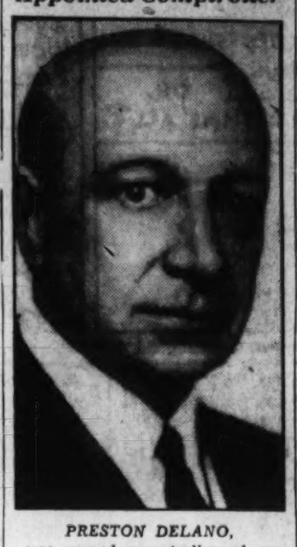

Dr. B. R. Lacy, president of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., will preach Tuesday night at the opening meeting, and Dr. Edgar Woods, of China, will be the guest speaker Wednesday night. His subject will be "Foreign Missions." Following Dr. Woods' address the hostess auxiliary will hold an informal reception at the church.

Gold Star Mothers Hold Rites Tomorrow

American Gold Star Mothers will conduct annual services at tomb of the Unknown Soldier at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow. Mrs. Mathilda Burling, national president, will preside, and the United States Army band will furnish music.

Short addresses will be delivered by national officers of the American Legion, Disabled American Veterans of Foreign Wars and Jewish War Veterans. A Presidential Proclamation has designated Sunday as Gold Star Mothers' Day.

Appointed Comptroller

PRESTON DELANO, was named comptroller of currency, succeeding J. F. T. O'Connor, resigned. Delano is a distant relative of President Roosevelt

Delano Named Comptroller By Roosevelt

O'Connor Post Filled
Home Loan Bank Chief
Very Distant Relative

Preston Delano, governor of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, and a distant relative of President Roosevelt, yesterday was appointed comptroller of the currency to succeed J. F. T. O'Connor.

O'Connor resigned last January to run for the Democratic nomination for Governor in California, and his position was held open pending outcome of the primary. O'Connor lost. Yesterday, however, the White House announced he had notified the President he did not desire reappointment but would return to the practice of law in California.

He told the President, also, that he would support the Democratic ticket in California's general election campaign.

Mr. Delano, 52, long a resident of Fairhaven, Mass., attended Harvard and is a graduate of Leland Stanford University. On the Coast he was engaged in the investment securities business and for a time was general manager of a small railroad in Oregon.

He came to Washington five years ago to assist the late Russell M. Hawkins, former member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Later became general manager of the Home Loan Bank system.

Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, said the relationship between the President and Delano was so distant that even the latter did not know what it was.

Girl, 20, Beaten; Purse Restored, But Thief Is Freed

A 20-year-old girl was beaten by a colored purse snatcher yesterday. After hitting the girl, he threw her to the ground, kicked her and said "I'm sorry, lady."

The girl, Verne Lynch, a telephone operator, required hospital treatment. She lives at 1908 K street northwest.

Charles L. Sincox, 1842 C street southeast, a mail truck driver, caught the man in an alley behind Pierce street northwest. Sincox restored the purse to Miss Lynch and turned his quarry over to a second man to hold while he went for the police.

Meanwhile, the second man was approached by a group of colored men in the alley, who persuaded him to release the purse-snatcher.

Man, Woman Held In Numbers Raid

Mary Jane Sims, 26, colored, 1141 Sixth street northeast, charged with operating a lottery and possession of slips, was held to the grand jury in $1,500 bond by Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Charlie C. Pierce, 29, colored, of the 700 block Fifth street northwest, was arrested on the street near his home, charged with operating a lottery and held for a later hearing.

U. S. Study Shows Girls' Teeth Worse Than Boys'

Little girls have more teeth missing, filled or decayed than little boys of the same age, though girls' teeth are no more susceptible to decay than boys'.

If there seems to be something strange in that statement, which there does, Drs. Henry Klein and Carroll E. Palmer of the Public Health Service can explain. And they do, in a study which was made public yesterday.

Gathering their data from examinations of 2,232 boys and 2,184 girls in the elementary schools of Hagerstown, Md., the researchers concluded that girls have the most trouble because they cut their teeth earlier. Hence the teeth of an 8-year-old female, for example, have been exposed longer to wear and germs than those of a boy the same age.

Adm. Dewey's Grandson Asks Divorce

Parted After 3 Days
Husband in Navy

George Dewey Hoffman, navy officer and grandson of Admiral Dewey, whose romance with the socially prominent Anne Claypole Daingerfield went on the rocks three days after their wedding, sued in District court yesterday for a divorce.

Miss Daingerfield was married to Hoffman, who is a lieutentant, junior grade, on June 15, 1936.

Lieut. Hoffman's petition, filed by William A. Coombe, attorney, said that three days after the marriage he was obliged to return to his station in San Diego, where he was assigned to the U. S. S. Long. His bride did not accompany him, the petition said, and later she declined to come to California to live.

Mrs. Hoffman, whose home here is at 1736 Columbia road northwest, said last night she did not plan to contest the suit. She has remained a resident of Washington, she said.

Lieut. Hoffman is the son of Mrs. Leonard Hoffman, of Washington and New York. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934.

Mrs. Hoffman, daughter of Mrs. J. S. Barbour Daingerfield, attended the Potomac School and Sacred Heart convent and made her Washington debut in 1933.

Army Plane Crash Buries Pilot In N. Y. Marsh

Hudson, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP).—An Army observation plane plunged into a marsh on the east side of the Hudson River today, buried so deeply that searchers strove in vain for hours to extricate the pilot.

Police, unable even to stir the heavy motor and cockpit, abandoned their efforts to await arrival of suitable equipment from Mitchel Field, Long Island, N. Y.

It was believed the plane was piloted by Capt. M. C. Harper, unreported since he left the Albany Airport early today for his Long Island base.

Humane Group Dedicates Home Today

Dedication of the new home of the Animal Protective Association, 3900 Wheeler road southeast, will take place at 2:30 p. m. today.

Miss Nina Halvey, corresponding secretary of the American Anti-Vivisection Society, of Philadelphia, and Charles Edward Russell, writer, will be guest speakers. The Rev. Samuel R. Allison, assistant minister of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, will speak on lives of Theodore F. and Sarah H. Sargent, in whose memories the buildings were contributed by their daughter, Virginia W. Sargent, founder and president of the association.

Bethesda Girl, 4, Holds Own After Delicate Operation

Although she is not out of danger, 4-year-old Nancy Jean Kurrie was reported to be doing "as well as can be expected" last night in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

Nancy Jean's nurse told The Post the plucky Bethesda, Md., child who underwent a delicate operation Thursday to correct a kidney condition caused by an auto acident last July, is not only holding her own but is one of the best patients in the ward.

Because of the seriousness of the operation—the odds were against her surviving it—hospital attaches refused to commit themselves on the child's recovery chances. Nancy Jean is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Kurrie.
